Brucker, New Deal Foe, Leads Senator Couzens in Michigan; Curley Wins, Moses Defeated

States Given 21 Billions In U.S. Funds, G.O.P. Shows

Loans and Grants Out of Proportion to Tax Paid, List Reveals.

Total Levies Put At $10,478,000,000

New York at Top of List of Amounts Received; Delaware Last.

By Robert C. Albright.

An official compilation of Federal operations in the 48 States during the first three years of the present Administration gave a grand total of nearly $21,000,000,000 in outright grants, loans and loans insured, through March 31, 1936, it was announced yesterday.

A breakdown of disbursements by States, prepared by the National Emergency Council, was photostated, enlarged and released by the National Republican Congressional Committee.

An accompanying chart, compiled by the committee from annual reports of the Secretary of the Treasury, showed the Government collected in taxes during a nearly comparative period only half the amount of commitments, or about $10,478,000,000. The chart covered tax receipts in the fiscal years 1934, 1935 and 1936.

"Inasmuch as these tables have been available to New Deal candidates for campaign use, the Republican Congressional Committee believes that they should likewise be available to the press," the committee stated. "We are therefore taking this means of making them public."

Out of Proportion.

The tables showed Federal loans and grants, particularly in some Southern States, out of all proportion to the amounts paid by such States in Federal taxes, and often without regard to the density of population. Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina, for example, were shown to have received more in grants, loans and loans insured, than the two Mid-western and New England States of Indiana and Massachusetts, although the former States paid less than one-fifth the taxes.

The four Southern States received a total of $1,147,347,800 in grants and loans, and paid $99,483,278 in Federal taxes, a ratio of 11½ to 1. Indiana and Massachusetts combined received $1,009,139,453, but paid taxes of $584,970,971, a ratio of 1¾ to 1. Indiana received less in Federal benefits than Arkansas and Mississippi combined, but paid more than ten times as much taxes.

The committee pointed out that Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina were the homes, respectively, of Speaker Bankhead, Senate Democratic Leader Robinson, Senator Pat Harrison, and Senator James F. Byrnes, Administration stalwarts.

All Not So Favored.

All States in the South did not fare so well. Virginia paid the Government $439,646,838 in taxes during the three fiscal years, but received from all Government agencies in grants, loans and loans insured, only $319,239,446.

Delaware, which in 1936 paid the highest per capita tax of any State —$151.14—received the smallest volume of grants, loans and loans insured. Delaware paid the Government $34,657,266 in the three fiscal years, but received in grants and loans through March 31 only $28,871,228.19.

On the other hand, Arkansas, which paid the lowest per capita tax in 1936, and only $9,719,442 in Federal taxes over the three-year period, received $303,730,943 in grants and loans. Vermont, a rock-ribbed Republican State, whose population density approximates that of Arkansas, received $84,284,970.66.

In volume, New York State received the largest amount of Federal monetary benefit—$2,238,656,893. But even this figure did not equal taxes paid by New York during the fiscal years 1934, 1935 and 1936. The taxes totaled $2,559,115,237.

Texas High on List.

High on the list of beneficiaries was Texas, which received an aggregate of $964,419,700, but paid taxes into the Federal Treasury in the last three fiscal years of only $228,400,674.

Federal aid to Texas has reached such proportions that local officials are boasting about it, the Republican Congressional committee claims. It quoted the following excerpt from a statement put out by

D.C. Man Tells of Battle for Life; Caught on Barb of Sea Monster

U. S. Aid Pulled Through Gulf by Fish, Saved by Boat's Crew.

How it feels to be caught on the poisonous barb of a 400-pound sting ray, or stingaree, and swept through the Gulf of Mexico to what might have been a horrible death was related yesterday by a Washington man.

He is Harlan Page, an investigator for the Federal Alcohol Administration, who lives at 3366 Twenty-eighth street in Chevy Chase. Page returned here yesterday with a bandaged foot, a limp and a new appreciation of the Victor Hugo character who battled with a devil fish.

His terrifying adventure happened September 6. He was in Florida on official business and he and a party recruited in St. Petersburg had gone out into the gulf on a fishing expedition.

"If I liked fishing the thing never would have happened," Page said, as he sat in the FAA office in the Department of Justice Building. "The fact is I haven't the patience to fish. There were two others on the boat who were pretty much like me, so we put on trunks and dived overboard for a swim.

"We swam around and then the other two fellows swam back to the boat. I was about to follow when it happened. Something hit me like the well-known ton of bricks. I was treading water at the time.

Col. Stengle Named Head Of A. F. G. E.

600 New Deal Members of D. C. Expelled, Rest Made Powerless.

By Samuel Lubell.
A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 15.—Conservative leaders took over the convention of the American Federation of Government Employes today, electing Col. Charles I. Stengle president on the first ballot, expelling from 600 to 800 members of 5 "New Deal" lodges in the District, and setting the stage for the enactment of constitutional amendments that will place the remaining District left-wing lodges under the thumbs of Washington members of the executive council.

Stengle, former Tammany Representative and for the past two years in charge of the federation's organization and legislative program, received 157 votes. His closest opponent—John H. W. Smith, New York liberal, supported by the District "progressives" and field liberals—received 87 votes. E. Claude Babcock, former president, got 8 votes.

Stengle's election was made certain this morning when field members of the national executive council, alarmed by last night's pro-Babcock demonstrations, decided to join in a united front to stop his re-election.

Other Candidates Withdraw.

Both James A. Campbell, of Cincinnati, and James B. Burns, of San Francisco, also put forward as "stop Stengle" candidates by the field members, withdrew from the race. The three field vice president—John P. Daniels, of Philadelphia; Edgar Carpenter, of Detroit, and Perry Myers, of Seattle—threw their votes to Stengle.

An acceptance speech following the administering of the oath of office by George Googe, American Federation of Labor "trouble shooter," who has presided over the convention, Stengle promised to heal the breaches between factions.

However, the constitution committee, headed by James C. Yaden, president of the District department, is known to be considering amendments that would place the New Deal lodges in the District at the mercy of the council.

"Mass" Rule Considered.

Introduction of a rule that would permit the acceptance of all amendments as a whole instead of separately is reported to be under consideration by conservative leaders. Should such a rule (which requires a two-thirds vote) be passed, the constitution probably will be virtually rewritten with these three changes:

Extending the prohibitions on legislative activity by individual lodges now in the constitution to cover the "administration of government offices" as well.

Changing the method of voting in conventions to a per capita basis, insuring the larger lodges control of the convention.

Dropping of the provision for the recall of officers from the constitution, automatically terminating the recall proceedings pending against four Washington members of the executive council.

Stengle's election followed shortly after Babcock's resignation was accepted by the convention at his own request. Babcock spoke more than half an hour in his own defense and no sooner had he left the platform than four delegates leaped up to move for reconsideration of his resignation, to the cheers of what seemed to be a majority.

Whatever danger there was of stampeding the convention to Babcock was checked by parliamentary rulings of Googe and a motion by David Glass, national charter president, to retire Babcock on a pension. By the time the motion was debated and lost Babcock had left the room and his dynamic hold on the convention had worn off.

Other Highlight.

Other highlights of the session were:

Expulsion of from 600 to 800 District members by the revocation of temporary certificates

Landon Back Home, Sure He Will Win

'Victory Parade Started,' He Says, Jubilant Over Trip East.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

Topeka, Sept. 15.—Militant and happy, Gov. Alf M. Landon arrived home tonight after invading the East. Greatly encouraged by Republican success in Maine and by his almost unprecedented ovations in upper New York, the Kansas Governor insisted that the "victory parade has started."

Landon had staked his political future upon his Eastern trip. Members of his campaign party say he felt a defeat in Maine, after his appearance there, would have meant an end of his chances. The narrow margin by which Senator White defeated Gov. Louis J. Brann was not too encouraging, but this was offset by the size of the Republican vote piled up in the governorship race and by the winning of three Congressional seats.

The candidate himself was surprised by the receptions he received in New York. He feels that his somewhat daring Eastern expedition has caught the imagination of the country and that the tide is turning in his direction. He feels also that the change of pace evident in his Maine speech has done much to put aside the impression that he would not conduct a militant campaign.

Meanwhile, dates have been definitely set for five major speeches by Gov. Landon as follows:

Friday—Before Young Republicans at Topeka.
September 22—Des Moines.
September 24—Minneapolis.
September 26—Milwaukee.
October 9—Chicago.

Shows More Confidence.

Clad in the same wrinkled gray business suit he has worn on most of his back platform appearances, Landon smiled upon crowds at every stop today as his train moved from the industrial East into the prairie States. He spoke more incisively than he had in the past. There was more of confidence in his attitude as he predicted that the voters "will put this country back on the road we wish to travel."

The train pulled through lowlands flooded by heavy rains. In some places houses were under water. Landon remarked that the corn crop looked fairly good in Illinois; he demanded to know why farm products should be imported, but he talked mostly about the Maine election and the New York crowds.

Relieved of Burden.

The Democratic high command has predicted that the Republican candidate will not receive sufficient votes in upper New York to offset the Democratic votes in New York City. Landon believes that if campaign crowds mean anything, the Democrats are wrong. He was particularly impressed by his reception at Rochester, where at least 8,000 persons waited until nearly 1 a. m. for his arrival.

The success of the Eastern trip has taken a load off the minds of Landon advisers. They admit now

Lodge Heads Field In Massachusetts

Primary High Spots.

Senator James Couzens was running behind former Governor W. M. Brucker for the Michigan Republican Senatorial nomination.

Frank Murphy, who took leave of absence as Commissioner General to the Philippines to run for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Michigan, was being hard-pressed by George W. Welsh.

Gov. James M. Curley and Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., apparently won the Democratic and Republican Senatorial nominations, respectively, in Massachusetts.

Former Senator George Moses appeared defeated, 2 to 1, by Gov. H. Styles Bridges for the Republican nomination for the Senate in New Hampshire.

Alexander Wylie, Republican, and Arthur W. Lueck, Democrat, were leading for the gubernatorial nominations of their parties to oppose Gov. Philip La Follette in November.

In New York 7 of the 13 Townsend and Coughlin candidates for Congress were far behind. One Townsend supporter won a Democratic House nomination.

Couzens Is Trailing.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 15.—Senator James Couzens, pro-Roosevelt Republican, trailed former Gov. Wilbert M. Brucker in early returns tonight in the contest for the Republican Senatorial nomination.

Brucker, an outspoken critic of the New Deal, had 91,850 votes from the first 1,017 out of 3,467 precincts, against 59,377 for Couzens.

In reports from nearly a score of counties, Frank Murphy, Philippine high commissioner who is seeking the Democratic nomination for Governor, led George Welsh. The vote in 932 precincts was: Murphy, 31,971; Welsh, 26,342. Both Welsh and Murphy indorsed the Democratic National Administration.

Rep. Brown in Lead.

In the four-man race for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, Representative Prentiss M. Brown went into the lead on returns from 548 precincts. The vote was: Brown, 14,455; Prof. John H. Muyskens, 4,530; Louis B. Ward, 7,857 and Ralph W. Liddy, 3,866.

Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald took a long lead in the race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, polling 72,284 votes in 548 pdecincts to 10,605 for Roscoe C. Fitch.

The renomination of incumbent Congressmen was indicated generally, although Representative Verner W. Main, Third District Republican who was elected on a Townsend plan platform in a special election last year, was having a close race with Paul Shafer. Main has renounced the endorsement of the Townsend organization, which is supporting Rosslyn Sowers, Democrat, in the Congressional race.

Main polled 1,988 votes in the first 48 precincts to 1,521 for Shafer, Sowers, opposing Howard W. Cavanagh, led with 626 votes to Cavanagh's 373 in the same number of precincts.

Curley Leading, 2 to 1.

Boston, Sept. 15 (AP).—Gov. James M. Curley held more than a two-to-one lead tonight over Mayor Robert E. Greenwood, of Fitchburg, in the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in the Massachusetts primaries. Greenwood conceded defeat.

The vote in 849 of 1,764 Massachusetts precincts gave Curley 119,678; Greenwood, 49,897; Thomas C. O'Brien, 16,633. O'Brien, Union Party candidate, ran on stickers.

At the same time Henry Cabot Lodge jumped into a commanding lead for the Republican nomination for United States Senator.

Returns from 499 precincts gave

First Search Fails to Locate Atlantic Fliers

Richman and Merrill Pull Plane From Bog, Wait for Rickenbacker.

Musgrave Harbor, Newfoundland, Sept. 15 (Canadian Press).—Harry Richman and Dick Merrill today got their airplane out of the bog in which they were forced to land at the completion yesterday of their round-trip Atlantic crossing.

The fliers—Richman, the crooner, and Merrill, his pilot on the two ocean crossings—awaited the arrival of repair men with Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, who were trying to reach them by plane from New York.

(Rickenbacker, returning to Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, said he would try to contact them by wireless. He made plans for another search.)

Musgrave Harbor fishermen assisted Richman and Merrill in pulling the plane, the Lady Peace, out of the mud. When the craft, aiming for New York on its flight from Southport, England, was forced down at this isolated village, it nosed into the bog and its propeller was broken.

On their west-east crossing of the Atlantic a few days before, the two also missed their goal, London. They landed in a South Wales pasture.

The airmen dumped out fuel as they neared Newfoundland on their east-west flight, they told residents here, and used up their supply of 1,000 gallons of gasoline just as they reached land.

Last night Richman and Merrill got a good rest at the home of a storekeeper and today they said they felt fit. Richman made plans for the steak dinner in New York which he had expected to eat last night.

Oyster Season To Open Today; Shipment Here

Captain Docks With First Load; Says Prosperous Trade Is Due.

Today, September 16, is "officially" the day when the oyster is the world's.

The first shipment of the mollusks arrived at Washington's waterfront yesterday when the smack Virginia Estelle nosed up to the dock after an overnight trip from Crisfield, Md.

Capt. Cliff Evans brought only nine bushels with him, and they were grabbed in no time by oyster-starved Washingtonians, who, he says, ease 2,000 bushels a week down their throats with appropriate cocktail sauce during the height of the season.

Capt. Evans sees something deeply significant in the oyster and crab.

"We had the biggest crab season in history," he declared, "and we're going to have a bigger oyster season. Now that means only one thing. Those crabs and oysters are luxury foods and I say that prosperity is back when people buy 'em in record quantities. The answer is—Roosevelt!"

While yesterday may have been the official opening of the bivalve season, oysters won't begin to sell in big quantities until the "first nor'wester blows around," because "somehow folks jest don't seem to like 'em until it gets a little chilly. But wait until it gets cool and the boats will be in here three deep around the wharves, loaded down to the waterline with oysters."

Industry Gaining.

Oystering is one of the great industries of the Eastern Shore. It has grown tremendously with increased efficiency in refrigeration, and today Evans estimates there are 3,000 oyster fishermen in the vicinity of his own little town of Crisfield. "We ship 20 to 25 carloads a day out at the peak," he said, "with Chicago the principal market. Washington is one of the best markets on the Eastern Coast."

Oyster fishermen, with their long scissor-like tongs on which are rake teeth, earn $3 a day. Shuckers make 25 cents a gallon and their earnings range from $25 to $50 a week, depending on their speed.

"Now we have some very well-to-do people who are oyster shuckers in Crisfield," Evans said proudly. "They get well-to-do shucking oysters."

All shuckers, fishermen and marketers like to eat oysters, he said. They are one of the staple articles of diet and it does not matter that Can All These Boys Be Right?

Varying interpretations of the significance of the Republican victory in Maine Monday were given yesterday to the Associated Press by the following political figures:

John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee—"The results in Maine are splendid. They forecast, in my opinion a similar victory in November . . . Maine has pointed the way."

Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings—"The result is distinctly encouraging to the friends of the Administration throughout the country."

Senator William H. Dieterich (Democrat), of Illinois—"I would construe the Maine election as indicating strongly the re-election of President Roosevelt . . . The reduced majority in yesterday's senatorial election can only mean that Maine is traveling fast toward the Democrats."

William Lemke, Union Party Presidential nominee—"Results of the Maine election showed that the common-sense people are not satisfied to go back to the Hoover regime but wish to go forward to the Union Party."

Gilmour Young, national secretary of the Townsend organization—"The result of the Maine election was a Townsend victory."

Anti-Roosevelt Group Formed By Democrats

Marylanders Organize to Campaign for Defeat of New Dealers.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 15.—C. Bowie Rose, secretary, today announced the organization of the "Maryland Jeffersonian Democrats," with the purpose of bringing about the defeat of President Roosevelt and repudiating New Deal policies.

Rose said letters would be sent to 10,000 registered Democrats and an intensive program would start next week. The committee, many members of which were identified with the Association for the Defense of the Constitution, includes:

Clarence R. Bowie, Arthur M. Machen, John F. Davies, Paul M. Burnett, William H. Wooten, R. Contee Rose, Walter H. Buck, Charles B. Alexander, Isaac Lobe Straus, Randolph N. Dame, C. Bowie Rose and D. List Warner, of Baltimore; Robert S. Bright, Frederick County; Harry E. Karr, Baltimore County; Laurance M. Buck, Thomas F. Caldwalader and Ernest Volkart, Harford County; W. Bernard Duke, St. Marys County, and James F. Taylor, Somerset County.

In a statement, Rose said:

"The first course is that of negation—of refusing to follow the perfected course set by New Deal leaders. The second is that of positive disciplinary action by voting for the candidate most likely to defeat Mr. Roosevelt."

Letters sent out by the organization assailed New Deal policies, gave its reasons for repudiating the Roosevelt leadership, and added:

"To be effective in a Democratic State like Maryland, it is imperative that a Democratic forum be provided where such matters can be discussed between Democrats. At the present time, however, the only organized opposition to those in control of the party comes from Republicans, to whom Democrats are loath to turn for advice. The Maryland Jeffersonian Democrats' organization has been formed, in co-operation with the national group, to provide such forum for true Democrats."

Surety Chiefs, Roosevelt Plan Assistance Pact

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt and the heads of six insurance companies collaborated yesterday at the White House in outlining a program of mutual assistance.

The co-operation planned will consist chiefly of the exchange between the Government agencies and the insurance companies of statistics gathered by either group, in surveys of farm lands and city properties.

Neither the President nor the company officials would directly comment in refutation of the charge made by Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, at Allentown, Pa., on September 5, that "today no life insurance policy is secure; no savings account safe."

However, out of the conference did come a statement which strongly emphasized the stability and safety of insurance under the New Deal, and the present prosperity of the companies.

This statement was made by Charles P. Williams, president of the Western and Southern Life Insurance Co. He refused to speak at the White House, but offered the statement to reporters from his hotel room.

Free to Talk.

The President told reporters at his press conference that he had warned the executives jocularly as they left his office that the newsmen would ask them for comments on Knox's attack, which the roughriding Colonel repeated in Helena, Mont., last night. He said he had told the officials that they were free to say anything they wished.

The insurance chiefs were close-mouthed, however. They insisted there had been no politics at the session, refused to comment on the Knox addresses, and said the conference was "simply a nice visit."

The President said that the Knox charges had not been discussed, adding that the figures spoke for themselves. When another reporter pressed him later for comment he quoted Latin, "Res ipse loquitur." (The thing speaks for itself), to repeat his point.

The statement by Williams

Youth Held in Plot to Extort $25,000 From Shirley Temple

G-Men yesterday arrested a 16-year-old Atlanta youth, Frank Stephens, on charges of attempting to extort $25,000 from the mother of Shirley Temple, child movie star.

The boy, a gum-chewing "shiek" who worked in an Atlanta grocery store, was arraigned late yesterday before United States Commissioner Edward S. Griffith and released on $500 bond after nonchalantly admitting the charges.

It was the second attempt at extortion on the curly-headed darling of millions of movie-goers.

The threat was received in a letter mailed August 1, with an Atlanta postmark, which was addressed Mrs. Shirley Temple.

The letter directed the sum of $25,000 be mailed to Mr. Curtis Palmer, 142 Whitehall street southwest, Atlanta, Ga. Contained in the instructions in the letter was the threat:

"Get the money if you want to keep Shirley."

G-men directed by J. Edgar Hoover investigated the Atlanta address, which was a grocery store, but no one there knew of Curtis Palmer. Subsequent investigation of all the employes turned up the name of Frank Stephens, who had worked there occasionally on Saturday afternoons as a helper.

Young Stephens, short, dressed in slack pants, blue shirt and brown tie, was brought into the Atlanta F. B. I. headquarters. He was bareheaded and referred to himself as "Eddie."

There he confessed he sent the letter to Mrs. Temple "because I thought she would pay off."

John N. Garner (Remember Him?) Reappears Under Dude Homburg—Sheepish But Defiant

Washington's 4-month-old mystery: "Whatever became of John Nance Garner?" was solved yesterday.

Reporters looked under a beautiful new gray Homburg hat that entered the White House yesterday at lunch time, and there he was.

The well-known fisherman of Uvalde, Tex., was a little sheepish about the shining new headpiece that encased his pate.

For years, except on the absolutely "must dress" occasions that require a top hat, the Vice President has indulged his cowman's passion for 10-gallon headwear, never exposing his well-combed white locks to Washington weather in a sombrero less than some two feet from brim to brim. His new hat amounts to a social bombshell.

He said:

"I suppose you noticed my dude hat?"

He took it off and inspected it self-consciously.

"It was given to me by a very good friend. He said I had to wear it. How do you like it?"

He put it squarely on top of his head. The reporters looked at it silently. Then one of them spoke cautiously:

"You might wear it a little on one side."

The Vice President jerked off the hat and changed the subject. He said he had come to lunch with the President for an hour, but had stayed two.

"It was a fancy lunch and I had trouble with the peas," he added.

When a reporter asked jocularly if the peas had rolled off his knife, Mr. Garner glared at him in friendly fashion, and began talking about his plans.

"I'm just bumming around," he said. "Just a man from the sticks looking over the city. I wanted to talk to the boss before I go to New York."

Asked about his possible participation in the campaign, which has been featured thus far by his silent devotion to the trout streams of Texas, the Vice President laid a finger on his sun-crimsoned nose and said shyly:

"While I'm in New York I'll stay at the Biltmore."

The Biltmore Hotel is Democratic Party headquarters.

He added:

"All the prmiaries are over today, and so now I can tell them what to do."

Carefully adjusting his Homburg, he swept out laughing and reporters flashed the news that John Nance Garner had been found.

Landon Views Maine Triumph As 'Awakening'

U. S. Aroused, Says G. O. P. Leader; Brann Likely to Seek Recount.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 14.—Gov. Louis J. Brann of Maine, defeated for Senator in yesterday's election in that State by the Republican incumbent, Wallace H. White, Jr., was en route to New York tonight to confer with Democratic National Chairman James J. Farley on the possibility of demanding a recount.

Farley announced the visit but declined comment on the matter, saying Gov. Brann would speak for himself upon arrival here tomorrow.

Portland, Me., Sept. 15.—Maine stood strongly enlisted in the Republican column tonight but interpretation of its vote, ranging from a 40,000 majority for gubernatorial candidate Lewis C. Barrows down to a 5,000-vote lead for Senator Wallace H. White, varied in the Nation's political camps.

"The Maine election has proved that the people of this country are aroused to their danger and determined to preserve their system of life and government," commented Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Republican Presidential candidate, who made a last-minute foray into the State to urge support of the party's candidates for State and Federal offices.

"Maine continues Republican by a majority of 50,000 Dupont-Morgan dollars," said James M. Farley, Democratic national chairman. "Maine remains Republican in a local election by a reduced majority."

Compilation of the vote was virtually complete tonight with no chance that belated returns from isolated precincts could change the result. All but 6 of the 633 precincts were counted.

The tabulation showed:

For Governor: F. Harold Dubord (Democrat), 129,084; Secretary of State Lewis O. Barrows, 172,170.

Three Republican Congressmen were elected by approximate majorities ranging from 15,000 to 20,000. In the Congressional race, the Republicans re-elected one Congressman and defeated two Democrats who were up for re-election.

So close was the Brann-White contest, Chairman Farley hinted at a demand for recount. Farley said the White margin was so small that "it may take a recount to determine the actual vote.

Brann himself watched virtual completion of the vote count without comment, indicating he would issue a statement after more careful examination of the results.

In Boston Gov. James M. Curley (Democrat), said:

"I believe Gov. Brann should ask for a recount. I feel sure that if a recount is held, it will establish that Gov. Brann won.

Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, of the Republican National Committee, was quick to recall the ancient adage, "As Maine goes, so goes the Nation," in commenting on the result.

"The results are splendid," he said in a statement. "They forecast, in my opinion, a similar victory in November."

From the Democratic camp, however, came quick denial that the result was significant.

Encouraging, Says Cummings.

Attorney General Cummings said the result was "distinctly encouraging to the Democrats."

Senator William H. Dietrich (Democrat), Illinois, drew on the results of past Maine elections to prove it showed "that Maine is fast traveling towards the Democrats."

"I would consider the election as indicating strongly the re-election of President Roosevelt," he said. "The State is just as strongly Republican as Alabama and Mississippi are Democratic. In 1924, President Coolidge carried Maine by 96,000 votes and in 1932, Hoover piled up a 38,000 majority. The reduced majority in yesterday's Senatorial election can only mean that Maine is traveling fast toward the Democrats."

The "reduced majority" of White over Brann drew from the former the proud assertion that he had beaten a very "formidable opponent."

Chairman Hamilton, too, praised Brann and claimed that his defeat, even by the 5,000 majority, was a spectacular Republican victory.

Brann Had Several Assets.

Gov. Brann has had two terms as Governor of his State, and he has not only been personally popular, but his administration has seemingly been an efficient one," said Hamilton. "Not only did he have his congenial personality, but his record in public office as campaign assets."

In Chicago, Gilmour Young, national secretary, Townsend old-age pension organization, claimed the Maine election as a Townsend victory.

Winners in the Congressional and Senate races had been indorsed by the group, he said.

Gov. Brann tonight remained reticent as to future plans.

"My only statement today, following the election returns," Brann said, "is that I shall not have anything to say until I have had an opportunity to carefully examine the returns."

Politics and People

G. O. P. Victory in Maine Demonstrates Trend Away From New Deal.

By Franklyn Waltman

THE Republicans have every reason to feel cheerful after their victory in Maine, for it demonstrated much better than has been done previously that the trend of public sentiment has turned away from the New Deal. So much can be said of the Maine result without attaching too much importance to it and without subscribing to any fanciful shibboleth.

WALTMAN.

Although the people of Maine are not alien to America—they react in general like similar people elsewhere in this country—there are local conditions in Maine peculiar to that State. This is evidenced by the strong Republican complexion there—much stronger than it has ever been in any other State of the Union.

Such a peculiar local condition is the fact that a large portion of the people of Maine are property-holders—thus they are ahead of the economic game in this country and they are reluctant to have the rules changed. For instance—Maine has the smallest proportion of farms operated by tenants—4.5 per cent—of any State in the Union, according to the 1930 census. In Maine fewer farms are mortgaged than in any State except West Virginia.

Thus it is quite natural that the people of Maine should not display the same enthusiasm for legislation designed to redistribute wealth, grant moratoriums on debts and generally seek arbitrarily to smooth out the economic levels of the country, as would the people of a State where 72 per cent of the farms are operated by tenants and where 83 per cent are subject to mortgages.

Despite the open-handed willingness of the New Deal to pour money into this barometer State, Maine did not draw on the Federal Treasury to the same extent as States of a similar population. Maine is thirty-fifth in population rank. Oregon is thirty-fourth and South Dakota thirty-sixth.

From March 4, 1933, to March 31 of this year the people of Maine received from Federal loans, insured loans and direct grants, $150,000,000. The people of Oregon received $223,588,139, and the people of South Dakota, $259,000,000. On the other hand, the people of Maine in the last fiscal year paid into the Federal Treasury per capita taxes of $9.89; those of Oregon $8.46, and those of South Dakota $3.03.

These facts are recited here for no other purpose than to demonstrate that the economic necessities of the people of Maine are apparently not as great as those of many other States—and to show that their ability to pay is greater. And since voters' political convictions are shaped in large part by their selfish interests, they demonstrate there is good reason why the people of Maine should vote differently from people in other States.

These aspects of the matter supply the reason why the old slogan "as goes Maine, so goes the Nation" is scientifically unsound. Nevertheless, rock-ribbed Maine does sway more or less in the direction that the Nation is going. It did so in 1932 when it broke away from its riveted adherence to Republican candidates to go Democratic.

The significance of a victory can properly be appraised only by considering the fortifications of the stronghold taken and the fortitude of the defending force. Thus it is not significant that the Dutch should capture Holland, nor that in the year 1928 the Republicans should sweep Maine. But it was significant that the Democrats should take this Republican stronghold in the State election in 1932.

On that occasion, to the general amazement of the country, the Democrats captured the Governorship—and all the political advantage that is attached to that office and two of the State's three Congressional seats. It is true that the Democratic majorities were small, but it was the first time in generations that the Democrats succeeded in downing the Republicans.

Two years later the Democrats consolidated their earlier victory by substantial majorities. Had they lost their grip then, it would not have caused general surprise. But they did not. They strengthened it, holding the Governorship and two Congressional seats and failing to defeat the very popular Senator Frederick Hale by a margin of only 1,701 votes.

The Democrats entered this year's campaign with all the advantage on their side. They had control of the Statehouse, with all the patronage and favoritism that goes with such control. They had in Washington a Democratic Administration which was pouring money into the State for sensible and nonsensical things alike. In the last three years approximately $1,000,000 a day went into the State from Washington.

Also the Democrats had as Governor, and now their candidate for the Senate, one of the most popular political figures the State has known in recent years. He disliked the New Deal program—except for spending—and thus his mind was in harmony with the conservative nature of Maine's people. Behind him was the Democratic National chairman, determined, for psychological effect, to make a herculean effort in time and with money to score another Democratic victory in Maine.

Since the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee apparently is under the thumb of the Democratic chairman, we may never know how much money he poured into this election in Maine. But we know it was a large sum and that the Democratic campaign went so far as to revive a defunct newspaper as its mouthpiece.

And having the Senate committee under his thumb, the national chairman used it to strike out at the Republicans with the last-minute revelation that the DuPonts, Morgans, Rockefellers and other wealthy families had sent a $50,000 fund into Maine to help the Republicans—yet his own disbursements remained secret, at least until after election.

The President himself went to the State and promised it the economically unsound Passamaquoddy Dam, while Gov. Alf M. Landon went into Maine and there made the sharpest and most aggressive attack so far in his campaign on the New Deal.

And the result? The Republicans recaptured the governorship of the State by a sizable majority of more than 40,000 votes, beating a man who two years ago came within 1,700 votes of winning a Senate seat. They recaptured the two Congressional seats held by Democrats by majorities ranging from 16,000 to 19,000 and they beat off the fearsome Gov. Brann to hold their Senate seat by 5,000 votes. For the first time in four years all the major officers of the Maine people will be Republicans.

It is true that these Republican majorities cannot compare with the Republican plurality for Governor in 1928 or for President that year. But in that year there was a Republican landslide the Nation over. This year's result is not of landslide proportions but without doubt it demonstrates a return to normalcy.

As meat for thought, it should be remembered that this country as a whole normally is Republican can only slightly less than Maine is normally Republican.

Far West Trip For Roosevelt Not Yet Decided

European Strife Delays His Visit; Says He Picked Maine Winners.

President Roosevelt yesterday said he had not yet definitely decided to make a Far-West trip in October, although he had been scanning time-tables.

Sources close to the President indicated he did not want to be four days away from Washington, in the event the threatening international situation becomes further complicated.

However, Mr. Roosevelt may yet make the trip, it was said, if foreign affairs take on a more peaceful outlook.

The President yesterday said that no matter what the outcome of the election was on November 3, he was prepared to board a boat somewhere and take a fortnight's holiday.

Asked for a comment on the Maine elections, he said it had proved that he was a very good guesser. He said his own selections had been very close in three of the five races, farther off in the fourth and way off on a Congressional contest.

He told reporters with a smile that he was boasting, but that he believed he was really so good at picking winners that he thought he would syndicate his forecasts when he leaves the White House.

He said he had written his November election predictions on a piece of paper, and had tucked them away in a desk drawer, where nobody would see them beforehand. In this connection he recalled that he had won an Albany pool with newspaper experts on an election outcome in 1930.

Told that Lloyds of London had offered 5-3 odds on his election in November, he said he was afraid someone would construe that as British support.

Landon Speeds Toward Kansas In Happy Mood

that they cautioned against it and that it was the Governor's own idea. They said he had insisted upon taking the chance of the loss of prestige that would have followed a Maine defeat after his appearance there.

John Hamilton, Republican national chairman, boarded the train at Chicago and conferred briefly with the Governor. He was in a jubilant mood. At Chicago the train merely pulled into the railroad yards. There was no reception or speech. Then it proceeded across Illinois into Iowa, Missouri and Kansas. It passed through great stretches of flat country; through mining regions with mountainous piles of slag. The train was 1 hour 40 minutes late, but considerable crowds waited in the burning sun for the candidate's arrival.

He waved and shook hands. On the finger of his left hand was a bandage where an enthusiastic admirer had gouged his fingernail into the flesh.

Sends Wire to Maine.

Landon read to his audiences a telegram he had sent to Arthur E. Sewell, chairman of the Republican State Committee in Maine. It said:

"Please extend to the successful Republican candidates for all offices in your election yesterday my heartiest congratulations on their significant victories in Maine. Their election was something more than a mere partisan success. Maine has proved that the people of this country are aroused to their danger and determined to preserve their system of government and of life. The people of Maine have sounded a call that will find an immediate response throughout the Nation."

Landon told his listeners that the old saying: "As Maine goes so goes the Nation," meant something this year.

"It means," he said, "that every day Americans in your home State and in my home State, and everywhere throughout the Union, are getting together to put this country back on the road we wish to travel.

"Victory Parade Has Started."

"The victory parade has started that will span the Nation. It goes far beyond mere partisanship. Republicans, Democrats and Independents alike are taking part. It is already moving Westward. The great crowds at every stop in New England and New York State yesterday voiced their support.

"The American people are aroused at the waste and extravagance of their National Government. I don't need to prove that statement to you. All of you have seen the evidence in your own communities. The spirit evidenced in Maine yesterday has stirred the entire country and the voice of the Nation will speak in November in no uncertain terms."

At Fort Madison, Iowa, the only stop in that State, Landon told members of his audience that their land was capable of producing much more than it has been permitted to.

"Why shouldn't it have a chance to?" he asked. "And why have the markets been thrown away even for the present crop?

"Why should foreign grains be coming in for processing in Iowa mills? Why should meats from other nations be on the shelves of your stores? Why should imported dairy products be competing with your own? Why should your poultrymen be forced into direct competition with those in other lands.

"There is no need for me to suggest the answers to those questions. You know it from your own experience."

Greets Rail Workers.

At the Santa Fe Railroad shops, a short distance out of Fort Madison, Landon left the train and shook hands with several score workers. He especially greeted the men re-icing the train and inspecting it. When he was through, his right hand was covered with grease.

At Fort Madison, letters 30 feet high on the side of a bluff spelled out the name "LANDON." A sunflower 20 feet across and in natural colors was beside them. At La Plata, Mo., the Kansas Governor insisted relief must be administered without waste and extravagance, and honestly.

"Will you give us that kind of administration?" someone in the crowd shouted.

"Bet I will," Landon replied.

Landon made ten rear-platform talks in Illinois, Iowa and Missouri today. His next speech will be in Topeka Friday, when he will address the Young Republicans. Next week he will make another tour, with principal talks in Des Moines, Minneapolis and Milwaukee. He is expected to elaborate on the statement made yesterday in Springfield, Mass., that the Government's soil and water conservation policy must be more aggressive and that the Government must develop a Federal-State plan for conservation.

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

The American Liberty League said yesterday that "perhaps the most dangerous aspect of the New Deal attack upon the American system" is "an effort to stir up class warfare."

In a statement the league added: "It is noteworthy that Mr. Roosevelt has persistently endeavored to arouse class against class, presumably with the idea that by this method he could insure perpetuation of the New Deal in power.

"The issue he has raised is far more dangerous to the American system of government than any of the other activities of his Administration.

"Dictatorships the world over are based upon class hatreds and class-seeking for power—Communist in Russia, Fascist in Italy, Nazi in Germany."

* * * *

George L. Berry, president of Labor's Nonpartisan League, last night said "Gov. Landon's billionaire backers are not pouring their money out to back his campaign just to get their throats cut after election."

"They know the program, even if it has not yet been confined to the Governor," continued the head of the pro-Roosevelt league in a statement.

Asserting the Republican Presidential nominee in his Maine speech had "coupled his concern for small business with his worry over monopoly," Berry said "125,000 fewer business concerns failed in 1933 than in the Hoover year 1932."

Topeka, Kans., Sept. 15 (AP).—The Kansas Supreme Court today denied a plea of Presidential electors pledged to Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, Union Party nominee, that they be placed on the Kansas general election ballot.

Rejected by Secretary of State Frank J. Ryan because they had not complied with the State's primary election laws, the electors asked the court for a writ of mandamus to compel insertion of their names on the ballot.

The court today denied the writ. Its action left the Presidential election field in Kansas confined to Gov. Alf M. Landon, President Roosevelt and Norman Thomas, Socialist nominee.

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—The gates of Soldiers' Field were closed today to a mass meeting sponsored by the Townsend organization, but officers of the old-age pension group contemplated an effort to force them open by legal action.

Gilmour Young, national secretary, sought permission to use the vast lake front stadium on either September 26 or 27 for a gathering which would feature an address by Dr. Francis E. Townsend. He set forth in his letter to the Chicago South Park Board that the speech would be a nonpartisan" discussion of the Townsend Plan.

Robert J. Dunham, board president, announced the request had been denied because an ordinance forbade "any public meetings in the park system at which any speech is made on a political or economic question of controversial nature."

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—With the announced purpose of capitalizing upon the Maine victory, Republican leaders from 17 Eastern States will meet at the Eastern division headquarters here Thursday to prepare plans for the closing weeks of the campaign.

The conference was called by Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., Eastern division campaign manager, who said the Republican victory in Maine "points the way over which a majority of the States will follow on November 3."

National committeemen and committeewomen and State chairmen from Maine to Florida will participate in the conference.

250,000 Wheat Farmers to Get Benefit Checks

Planned Reduction in AAA Staff Here Prevented by Payments.

By the Associated Press.

AAA officials yesterday said between 250,000 and 300,000 winter wheat farmers would receive two benefit payment checks each in the next few months, one under the old agricultural adjustment program and the other under the current soil conservation program.

A delay in completing wheat payments under the invalidated program will present a planned reduction of 1,200 in the staff of AAA workers in Washington, said T. Weed Harvey, of the Farm Administration's business management office.

Harvey reported that application for payment for reduced acreage of winter wheat, seeded prior to the Supreme Court decision that voided the old program last January, had just begun to arrive here from the wheat belt.

He said the planned reduction in the staff of workers maintained here to audit and check compliance and send out payments would not be possible until November.

Harvey added that the old wheat payments would not overlap or interfere with payments for acreage shifted to soil-conserving crops and soil-building practices under the current farm program.

Payments under the soil conservation plan will be made from regional offices in three of the five national divisions used by the AAA to administer the program. Payments for the northeast and east central region, comprising 18 States near Washington, will be made from here.

Other AAA officials reported that $177,000,000 had been paid out of the $295,000,000 Congress provided to complete payments under the old adjustment program after processing taxes were invalidated. They estimated about $40,000,000 of this would go to the winter wheat farmers.

Dan Shea Is Dead; 'Beloved Veteran'

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 15 (AP).—Dan Shea, termed by Maj. Thomas J. Bannigan "the most beloved disabled veteran" of the World War, died today at the United States Veterans' Hospital at Newington.

Shea, who was born in Holyoke, Mass., 42 years ago, died of a heart ailment. For the last nine years, he had been unable to move any part of his body except his lips and his tongue. Five years ago he became blind.

Despite these afflictions, the veteran in the words of Maj. Bannigan, manager of the hospital, "had a spirit that could not be crushed and a common sense that told him that by that spirit he could be helpful to others."

"Dan Shea," said Maj. Bannigan, "was the best known, most beloved and respected disabled veteran in America. * * * He was the morale of our hospital, and in his passing we have lost a beloved comrade."

U. S. Sends Reich 'Occupation' Bill

By the Associated Press.

Recalling the days when American doughboys kept a watch on the Rhine, the United States yesterday "reminded" the German government that on September 30 it would owe this country installments totaling approximately $15,000,000 on army of occupation costs and Mixed Claims Commission awards.

The "reminder" was sent to Berlin by Secretary Hull in a formal note.

A total of 37,798,986 reichsmarks, at an exchange rate of 40 cents a mark, will be due from Germany on that date. It consists of 25,500,000 reichsmarks on mixed claims, 10,769,937 on army costs and 1,529,049 annuity payments under the moratorium.

The German government already is in arrears 221,340,000 reichsmarks for mixed claims, $5,752,687 for army costs, and 9,174,296 for annuity payments.

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Joseph Tipaldo, the Brooklyn laundryman whose suit resulted in the United States Supreme Court declaring New York's minimum wage law for women unconstitutional, is out of the laundry business and looking for a job, he said today.

"Business dropped and dropped," he explained. "My drivers said customers told them I shouldn't have fought this case."

Tipaldo admitted he was in the same fix as the four Schechter Brothers, also from New York, whose "sick chicken" case resulted in the Supreme Court outlawing the national industrial recovery act.

Nice Acts to Avert Celanese Walkout

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Gov. Harry W. Nice intervened today in the threatening situation at the celanese plant at Cumberland, where labor trouble may bring a walkout of several thousand employes.

In a telegram to the United Textile Workers of America in convention in New York, the Governor asked the organization's help in preventing a strike.

"In the interest of the industry, the State of Maryland, the employer and employe, I request that you confer with me in person or through your repreesetnatives before any action is taken," the telegram read.

Gov. Nice was credited with helping to end the recently adjusted labor trouble at the Kelly-Springfield tire plant at Cumberland.

Oyster Is King; First Shipment Arrives Here

Oyster Season To Open Today; Shipment Here

the workers are knee-deep in oysters all day for months at a time—they still enjoy eating them.

The industry, which was made up of scattered workers, each an individualist, for centuries, at last has blossomed out into a "big business" enterprise, with modern machinery, huge steamboat trawlers and mass-production methods.

Evans said Rufus Miles, of Norfolk, is the world's biggest dealer. Miles has two new dredges which scoop up the oysters from their beds on the bottom of brackish waters along the coast. He has a shucking plant half a block long with 500 shuckers standing elbow to elbow on each side of a long table shucking oysters as fast as they can all day long. Miles has a $2,000,000 investment in the business.

$1 a Bushel Average.

Evans has a small oyster farm of 70 acres, from which he will glean 70,000 bushels of oysters this year. Prices vary according to size from 50 cents to $1.50 a bushel, averaging $1.00. One bushel of oysters in the shell makes 1 gallon of shucked oysters.

The holidays will bring the season to its peak. Around Thanksgiving and Christmas Evans will sell 500 gallons in Washington every three days.

Oysters are rigidly inspected by Government agents. "They're on our necks every minute," Evans said, "at the shucking barns. The shuckers are examined by a doctor once a week. They have to wash their hands in hot water every time they leave the room and return, the tins must be sterilized and we must have concrete floors everywhere."

The Bureau of Fisheries says that oyster fishing has been carried on continuously since Colonial times. It was first started by the Indians, who left behind on the shores huge piles of shells—one mound contained 7,000,000 bushels of shells. It is the Nation's second most valuable fishery in point of income and first from the point of employment of men. The value of the annual crop is about $10,000,000.

It is said 60,000 persons make a living from oysters and it is the sole source of livelihood for whole communities, many of which are in nearby areas. Shipbuilders, blacksmiths making tongs, ice plants, box factories and railroad lines and, more recently, truckers, all share in the industries' business.

That "R" Business.

"Oysters," says Evans, "are darned good to eat all the year around. I've eaten bushels of 'em right dab in the middle of July. That business about the months with "Rs" in them don't mean a thing—except it cuts us oystermen out of a lot of money."

Reports from Baltimore stated the oysters of this season are of good to fair quality. The waters of four more counties, Charles, St. Marys, Somerset and Wicomico, were opened to tongers yesterday. The season opened two weeks ago in Kent, Queen Annes and Talbot Counties.

William Clark's Widow Sued for Heart Balm

Los Angeles, Sept. 15 (AP).—Charging theft of her husband's love, Mrs. Christine Fitzpatrick filed a $150,000 damage suit today against Mrs. Thelma Clark, widow of William A. Clark 3d, grandson of the late Montana copper magnate and United States Senator.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick said Mrs. Clark met her husband, Michael W. Fitzpatrick, purser on a Pacific Ocean liner, last January, enticed him with a display of wealth and finally induced him to resign his position to live at her ranch home near Escondido.

Mrs. Clark's husband was killed in an airplane accident two years ago.

Bullitt Is Sworn in As Envoy to France

By the United Press.

William C. Bullitt took the oath yesterday as Ambassador to France and thereby formally relinquished his commission as the United States' first envoy to Soviet Russia.

He recently was appointed to the Paris post by President Roosevelt to succeed Jesse I. Straus, New York department store operator, who resigned because of his health.

Bullitt will sail for Paris on the liner Washington, leaving New York on September 23.

Demand Suffrage, People of District Urged by Speaker

William McK. Clayton, speaking last night before the Petworth Citizens Association, urged that group and the people of Washington to demand local suffrage.

A member of the Brightwood Citizens Association and long active in civic affairs of the District, Clayton untlined Washington's Government from the days of "Boss" Shepherd until the present.

"We do not have national representation," he said, "but at least we should be able to elect the two civilian Commissioners." The lack of interest in District residents in local suffrage, is appalling, he asserted.

In connection with Clayton's talk a resolution on local representation prepared in April by James G. Yaden and referred to committee during the May meeting was to be voted on. Yaden was in Detroit attending the A. F. G. E. convention last night and members contended the resolution should be held until he was present.

After two hours debate and introduction of conflicting amendments it was decided to leave the resolution in its original form until October's meeting.

yet what had happened and I was scared. I let out a yell that must have been heard in Havana.

"I believe now that I collided with the sting ray by accident. When I struck out with my right leg, he let go with this poison barb near his tail.

"The worst part of the experience was when I discovered I couldn't get away. The barb had gone through my foot under the big toe and had come out through the top. I was hooked.

"The sting ray moved away and I naturally went with it. Sometimes I was above the water, sometimes under it. The next thing I knew the whole left side of my body had become numb.

Swim to Rescue.

"The boat was about 50 yards away. When I yelled two members of the crew jumped overboard and started toward me. They both had knives.

"One of them held me up, and the other went to work to separate me from the sting ray. I don't know just what he did, whether he cut the barb away, broke it off, or what.

"The numbness began to leave me when they got me back to the beach. The poison must have been like an anesthetic, because now I began to feel pain all over. It was terrific. In France, I once had a large toe nail pulled off with pliers, but this was worse. I was yelling like a wild man, and then I passed out.

"However, I do remember that some native pulled the sting ray's barb from my foot and then sucked the poison away.

"After I was back in the botel, other natives put a sort of pump on the wound and they bathed my foot with hot water and bicarbonate of soda.

Lucky to Escape Death.

"They told me that if the poison barb had gone into the calf of my leg or anywhere near a blood vessel it would have killed me. As it was, it just went into the cartelage or gristle of my toe. So I know I was lucky."

The sting ray that Page encountered was killed by those on the boat and taken to shore, where a scales showed it to weigh 400 pounds.

The next time he goes out in the Gulf of Mexico, Page said, he is going to fish whether he likes it or not.

5 States' Voters Pick Nominees In Primaries

Lodge, 99,885; Alonzo B. Cook, 11,599; Guy M. Gray, 5,858, and O'Brien, 249.

Neither John W. Haigis, candidate for Governor in the Republican primary, nor Charles L. Hurley, candidate for Democratic nomination for Governor, had opposition.

The senatorial seat for which Curley and Greenwood contest is that of Marcus A. Coolidge, of Fitchburg, father-in-law of Greenwood. Senator Coolidge does not seek re-election and publicly asked support for Greenwood.

Philip J. Philbin, whom the Democratic State convention indorsed for Lieutenant Governor, held the edge in a close three-cornered fight for the Democratic nomination.

Returns from 119 precincts in Massachusetts gave Philbin, 2,681; Francis Kelly, 2,216, and Thomas Galvin, 1,901.

Bridges Defeats Moses.

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 15 (AP).—Youthful Gov. H. Styles Bridges defeated the comeback effort of former Senator George H. Moses for the Republican nomination for the U. S. Senate in New Hampshire's primaries tonight.

Bridges, 39-year-old Progressive, had a lead of more than 8,000 over Moses, who had the indorsement of former President Herbert Hoover.

Bridges' vote, with returns from 215 of the State's 295 precincts tabulated, was 24,888 and Moses 16,333.

Moses, however, declined to concede his defeat, saying: "Not yet," to newspapermen's requests for a statement.

State Representative William J. Callahan, 78-year-old advocate of the Townsend plan, trailed far behind.

Elliott A. Carter, of Nashua, seeking the gubernatorial nomination on the Republican ticket, obtained a slight lead in returns from smaller communities but this later was overcome by Maj. Francis P. Murphy, also Nashua. The count: Murphy, 6,728, and Carter, 4,596.

Representative Charles W. Tobey, seeking his third term in the Second District Congressional fight, amassed 4,823 votes in 60 out of 168 precincts, more than the combined vote of his four opponents. Thomas Laite, Townsend organizer, who had indorsement of Rev. Charles E. Coughin, polled 606; Joseph A. Moore, Canaan, 248; Charles F. Thompson, Concord, 44, and John D. Warren, Nashua, 573.

In the First District, Arthur A. Greene, Townsend candidate, and Alice G. Flynn, who campaigned on Farther Coughlin's program, ran far behind the leaders. Both are Democrats.

In the Democratic fight in that district 28 precincts out of 129 gave Edward W. Banigan, 28; Alice Flynn, 274; Greene, 410; Edward A. Lambert, 74; Timothy F. O'Connor, 187; Alphone Roy, 946 and John J. Sheehan, 632.

Chapple Is Behind.

Milwaukee, Sept. 15 (AP).—John B. Chapple, foe of Gov. Philip F. La Follette was behind Alexander Wiley for the Republican Governorship nomination in early returns tonight from Wisconsin's primary.

The vote in 469 of the State's 2,928 precincts was: Chapple, 9,195; Wiley, 9,482.

The same precincts gave for the Democratic nomination:

Arthur W. Lueck, 8,459; State Senator William D. Carroll, 5,853.

Gov. La Follette, Progresive, received 16,881 in 463 precincts.

The Governor, unopposed for renomination, polled about 28 per cent of the vote reported in the early returns. While La Follette did little campaigning, his supporters were hopeful he would receive a large complimentary vote.

The Republicans ran a poor third in the State election of 1932, their candidate totaling 172,980 as against La Follette's 373,093 and the Democratic candidate's 359,467.

Chapple ran independently of the State Republican organization, which indorsed Wiley. He concentrated his attack on La Follette from the outset, paying little attention to his intra-party opponent.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 16 (Wednesday) (AP).—Seven of the 13 Townsendites and Coughlin supporters seeking congressional nominations suffered heavy reversals in New York's primary election on the basis of early returns today, but one candidate backing the $200-a-month pension plan succeeded in winning a Democratic contest.

Returns from the other five contests were not available at midnight.

5 Children See Parents' Burial, Crash Victims

Grandmother to Care for Orphans; Needs Help to Meet Expenses.

Five children stood quietly in a small cemetery near Fredericksburg, Va., yesterday and watched the bodies of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Tompkinson, of 1301 Fourth street southwest, being lowered into twin graves.

Only the children, now destitute orphans, and a few relatives attended the quiet ceremony for the man and woman were killed in an automobile accident near Fredericksburg last Saturday.

Earl, jr., 12, the eldest, tried his best to stem the tears. The others, Clarence, 11; Jack, 9; Ruby, 7, and Freddy, 3, just looked on. Aloha Jean, 5, is living with relatives in Mount Holly, N. C.

Funeral services were held from the Elkins funeral home in Fredericksburg. The bodies were then taken to the graveyard.

At home Mrs. Irene Corley, who came here from North Carolina to take care of her grandchildren, said she did not know how she could support them.

"We are going to stay here," she explained, "until some legal matters are settled, then if I can I am going to take them all back to Mount Holly with me. I don't want the children separated."

Mrs. Emma Hurlburt, of 437 Ingraham street northwest, herself a grandmother, told The Post last night she is collecting and conditioning clothing for the Tompkinsons.

"A grandmother's fund" was proposed by Mrs. Alexander Trowbridge, of the Dodge Hotel. She offered to start the fund with $5.

Funeral expenses for Mr. and Mrs. Tompkinson were donated the Catholic Charities.

Mansfield Plea Denied; Board Continues Trial

Counsel for Detective and City Wrangle Over Pistol Charge.

After the Police Trial Board had refused to admit as evidence a statement by Detective Sergt. A. D. Mansfield that he had loaned a pistol to Logan Wilton during the Shrine convention, the case against the detective sergeant was continued yesterday until next Tuesday.

Mansfield, who is charged specifically with conduct "prejudicial to the reputation, good order and discipline of the force," declined to testify on advise of his counsel, Attorneys Joseph Kelly and F. Joseph Donohue.

The trial developed into a bitter legal battle between Mansfield's counsel and Prosecutors Chester Gray and Matt Mahorner, assistant corporation counsels, when Arthur B. Caldwell, assistant District attorney, was put on the stand.

Caldwell testified that in his opinion, the action of Mansfield did not constitute a violation of the act of Congress governing the transfer of deadly weapons.

Attorneys for Mansfield claimed that at the time of the supposed transfer, Logan Wilton, alleged receiver of Mansfield's pistol, was a duly authorized special officer.

Detective Roy E. Blick, of the vice squad, who arrested Logan Wilton and his twin brother, John S. Wilton, in an automobile at Fourteenth and I streets northwest on August 25, testified that he had found two guns in the car. He also said he found two police badges, one in the car and the other in Logan's pocket. The Wilton brothers were charged with impersonating an officer.

The board adjourned without hearing the case against Detective E. L. Dalstrom, charged with Mansfield of conduct prejudicial to the reputation of the force.

Lettuce Strikers And Police Clash

Salinas, Calif., Sept. 15 (AP).—Kerosene, tear gas bombs, carpet tacks and red pepper flew from police and picket lines today as lettuce shippers began packing their product behind barricades in an effort to circumvent a strike of 3,000 organized vegetable workers.

The pickets spoiled portions of three truckloads of lettuce by hurling kerosene into them as they rolled toward the packing plant.

Police drove the strikers back with tear gas shells when more lettuce arrived for packing.

Red pepper was tossed at some of the truck drivers and a shower of carpet tacks fell on the highway used by the truckers. Eight pickets were arrested, bringing the number of arrests to 16 in two days. The only casualty reported was a bystander who was struck by a rock.

The growers and shippers started harvesting early this morning with crews of outside workers.

At stake was a $2,000,000 lettuce crop.

Ship and Rescuer Buffeted by Gale

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 15 (AP).—Two Norwegian steamers rolled in a strong south gale about 500 miles northeast of Puerto Rico tonight, waiting until weather conditions would permit one to tow the other into port for repairs.

One was the S. S. Torvanger, which weathered a tropical hurricane last night, but came out with a smashed rudder and bad leaks. The other was the S. S. Noravid, which raced to the aid of the disabled ship after learning of its plight by radio.

Insurance Under New Deal Is Stable, Safe, Says One Conferee.

stressed that "holders of American life insurance policies possess the safest of all possible securities." It said:

"We advised the President that between January 1, 1933, and June 30, of this year, the combined assets of all life insurance companies in this country increased more than $3,000,000,000. These assets now total approximately $23,915,000,000 (B) against $20,900,000,000 (B) at the beginning of 1933."

Cites Drop in Loans.

Emphasizing the "pronounced improvement" in business, Williams cited the drop in loans to policyholders from 18 per cent of the companies' assets in 1933 to 14 per cent today. He said the President had referred to the various Government activities which had been helpful to the companies, such as the purchase of $291,972,000 in farm mortgages, the refinancing of $188,600,000 of small-home mortgages and the loans to life insurance companies of $42,800,000.

Williams added:

"These stabilizing activities of the Government were very instrumental in enabling the companies promptly to fulfill their contracts with policyholders throughout the depression."

Before the conference Stephen T. Early, a Presidential secretary, told reporters that the President had no thought or intention of creating a Federal insurance agency of any sort.

Frederick H. Ecker, chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., told reporters that one of the more important subjects discussed was the matter of company co-operation with the social-security program of the Administration.

Annuity Policies.

This co-operation, according to Ecker, could be achieved through annuity policies which would supplement benefits received by individuals under the social security act.

The President, in discussing this phase, pointed out the need of the small-income group for paid-up policies to round out the regular scale of benefits received under the act.

In commenting on the figures showing that while the total of insurance has increased, the average size of the individual policies has decreased, the President stated that the bottom of the pyramid was getting wider all the time.

According to Early, the President has been keeping an almost continuous check on insurance since 1930, when he was Governor of New York. James Beha, then State superintendent of insurance for New York and one of the men invited to yesterday's conference, advised the President then that insurance companies were unable to liquidate at that time because of the extent of the shrinkage in the value of their securities during the depression.

Speculation Cited.

In this connection came the President's press conference statement that one of the matters discussed with the executives yesterday was the danger inherent in local speculative rises of real estate. He sought assurance that in case of a boom, the insurance land valuations will not follow upward the rise in land prices too closely. He said taht in certain areas speculation in farm land raised prices too high in sales values, and that some insurance companies loaned too much money on the basis of those false values.

Beha, delayed in New York, phoned his regrets to the President and forwarded data asked by the White House. William Safford, president of the Western and Southern Indemnity, also invited, was similarly delayed, but brought his data to the White House later in the afternoon.

Called "Absurd."

Detroit, Sept. 15 (AP).—Representative Henry D. Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, today characterized as "ridiculous and absurd" assertions attributed to Col. Frank Knox, Republican candidate for Vice President, that "no life insurance is secure; no savings bank safe."

Steagall was one of a group of speakers before the annual meeting of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks.

Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, another speaker, asserted that "many of the banks which never should have been chartered," were eliminated between 1929 and 1933. He joined Steagall in declaring the country's banking structure now "is in a stronger position than it has been for many years." Crowley urged against any hasty action toward reducing the present insurance assessment of one-twelfth of 1 per cent of average deposits.

18 U. S. Philosophers Spurn Berlin Meeting

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Eighteen American philosophers today made public a letter in which they refused an invitation to attend a meeting of the German Philosophical Association in Berlin.

They said they could not "honorably be present and by our presence condone, a philosophical conference whose conferees are de facto deprived of that freedom of thought and speech without which philosophy is but an apologia for the ruling powers."

Those signing the letter were Horace M. Kallen, who made it public; John Dewey, Sidney Hook, T. V. Smith, Irwin Edman, A. N. Whitehead, H. A. Overstreet, Ralph Barton Perry, W. E. Hocking, H. M. Sheffer, Wendell T. Bush, W. P. Montague, Ernest Nagel, W. A. Sheldon, A. L. Locke, Alexander Meklejohn, M. C. Otto and J. A. Irving.

Murder Theory Falls; School Claims Skeleton

Cleveland, Sept. 15 (AP).—Coroner A. J. Pearse said today a skeleton found buried in East Cleveland was a discarded medical school specimen and not a seventh victim of the mad Kingsbury Run slayer.

L. D. Mennell, a school teacher, said the skeleton belonged to him, the coroner said. Mennell reported he buried it Labor Day when he moved from the vicinity.

Two boys discovered the skeleton on their way home from school.

Many Jews Are Injured In Rumanian Disorders

Bucharest, Sept. 15 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—Many Jews were injured, and homes, a synagogue and places of busines were damaged in disorders reported today from several localities in Rumania.

Thirty-eight Jewish houses were practically destroyed in Balotina, a suburb of Baltzi, Bessarabia, by men wielding iron bars and clubs, who beat Jews and escaped before gendarmes arrived.

Son of Rep. South Plunges to Death

Lubbock, Tex., Sept. 15 (AP).—Carl W. South, 18-year-old son of Representative Charles S. South (Democat), Texas, plunged to death from his room on the tenth floor of a hotel here today. Justice J. T. Trigg returned a verdict of suicide.

The youth, who came to Lubbock to enroll in Texas Technological College, left two notes. One requested that his father be notified. The second merely read: "Love to all, Bill."

Representative South, notified of his son's death, immediately started from Coleman for Lubbock.

When South announced for Congress in 1934, the boy took the stump for him. After his graduation from high school he twice entered the University of Texas. Last year he attended George Washington University.

Sacasa Holds U.S. Bound To Give Nicaragua Aid

Colon, Panama, Sept. 15 (AP).—The United States is obligated to intervene, morally if not with troops, in the affairs of Nicaragua, former President Juan B. Sacasa declared today.

"The United States went from one extreme to another,"—Sacasa who fled the country recently after resigning his office, declared, "in abandoning the country overnight to a policy of nonintervention, thereby demonstrating its lack of knowledge of Nicaraguan psychology. Fair elections are impossible in Nicaragua as long as the country is dominated by an armed force."

Americans, in Telegrams Praise Speech of Pope

Vatican City, Sept. 15 (AP).—A flood of telegrams from America congratulating Pope Pius XI for his speech to Spanish refugees yesterday have reached the Holy See, the Osservatore Romano, Vatican organ, disclosed today.

U. S. Neutrality Unenforceable, Baker Believes

Wilson Aid Sees Dangers in Present Laws When Distress Grows.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 15.—An opinion that neutrality legislation enacted by the United States is at variance with the laws of neutral trade accepted by the rest of the world and may not be enforceable is expressed by Newton D. Baker, in an article published in "Foreign Affairs" tomorrow.

Baker, Secretary of War in the Woodrow Wilson administration, expressed this view in a lengthy article entitled "Why We Went to War." He defends Wilson's attitude and actions and denies that munition makers or bankers led the United States into conflict.

Discussing commercial influences on diplomacy during the World War and then applying his observations to the present, Baker says:

"I hold no brief for war prosperity. On purely economic grounds it is, in the long view, expensive and unreliable, but I do think something can be said for a nation endeavoring to ameliorate, so far as it can, the economic disaster thrust upon it by the war activities of others, and I venture the observation that the lessons of history indicate that in any future similar situation it will be extremely difficult to induce our people to keep from seeking such relief when they begin to suffer too cruelly as the result of wars in which they have no part.

Sees Grave Danger.

"I am disposed personally to fear that neutrality legislation, now enacted, which looks to isolation and complete trade abstention with belligerents generally and is at variance with the laws of neutral trade accepted by the rest of the world, will have inherent in it the grave danger of being unable to control our own people into obedience when the pressure of distress becomes greater than they are willing to bear."

After asserting that "it has become the fashion to suggest that our entry into the war was not in fact for the reasons then stated and generally accepted," Baker says that he has devoted most of his free time during the past year to the study resulting in this article.

He says the suggestions that pressure of special interests seeking advantage or the beguilements of foreign propaganda caused American entrance into the war "strain the imagination to the breaking point."

His studies, he says, led him to "the clear conviction that the entry of the United States into the World War was not in the least affected by munitions makers or bankers, that the business interests of the country and the welfare of our people during the long struggle were a constant, but, as it seems to me, a proper object of solicitude by the Government, but that nothing done in the protection or furtherance of these business interests affected the ultimate decision.

Submarine Decided Us.

"I am convinced also that our entrance into the war was caused directly and solely by the German use of the submarine and that to the last President Wilson worked to keep America out of the war, not only for those reasons which would move any enlightened statesman who tried to save his country from such horrors, but also and primarily because of his conviction that a saving mission was a part of a providential plan for the world."

Wilson's idealism, Baker concludes, "was in fact a very far-seeing but stern realism.

"We Americans at the present moment are looking with dread and disapproval at the menace of war which hangs over Europe."

He says the causes of international dissension may be analyzed as irrational but they exist.

"For all practical purposes," he adds, "nations have ultimate interests which they would rather fight for than surrender. Those interests may be wise or unwise, selfish or unselfish. In 1917 the United States had such an interest and it was untainted by any selfish consideration."

'War Can Be Avoided,' Gen. Butler Declares

Denver, Sept. 15 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, United States Marines, retired, told the National Encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars today "if we will all insist on doing our fighting at home, there will be no war."

"War can be avoided," he said. "Just pass a law to conscript everything—conscript dollars as well as men, industry, farming, everything."

Flu Epidemics' End Predicted By New Vaccine

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 15.—An end to "flu" epidemics was forecast today at the Harvard Tercentenary through a new influenza vaccine which, it was announced, is being developed in two of the world's foremost medical institutions, one American, the other English.

The vaccine is made from living virus, the sub-microscopic "agent" which causes flu epidemics. At Rockefeller Institute, New York City, the vaccine already is in human use with every evidence of effective prevention.

At the National Institute of Medical Research, Hampstead, England, the vaccine, made by a method slightly different from the American process, shows super-immunizing effects on animals susceptible to human flu.

The vaccine work and other flu discoveries were reported at the Harvard Medical School Tercentenary by William G. Smillie, M. D., professor of public health administration at Harvard.

Another vaccine nearly perfected, which promises to end typhus, one of the great epidemics of wartime, was reported by Dr. Hans Zinsser, of Harvard. There are two kinds of typhus—European and American. A vaccine for the American kind, developed at Harvard, now is in extensive use in Mexico.

For European typhus, Dr. Zinsser said, Harvard medical men have found a vaccine effective for guinea pigs. A similar human European typhus vaccine will be tried out, when perfected, in Chile, where the European variety of the disease is prevalent.

Fortune Is Willed To Death Suspect

Los Angeles, Sept. 15 (AP).—The will of Mrs. Anna Powell Crookshank, 78, whose sudden death September 10 is being investigated by police, was filed for pobate today. It bequeaths the bulk of her estate, valued unofficially at $150,000, to Thaddeus Childe Pickens, 21-year-old artist and poet and a figure in the bitterly contested divorce suit of Mrs. Crookshank with David C. Crookshank, 85, a few months ago.

Escaped Ape Slain At Door by Woman

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Miss Martha Schmidt, 26, who says she never before handled firearms, brought down a 65-pound ape with one blast of a shotgun.

The shooting occurred, not in the jungles of the anthropoid's native South America, but at Miss Schmidt's home in Suffold County, Long Island, yesterday.

The ape, christened Jocko, escaped from a roadside refreshment stand five days ago, killed two dogs and terrorized the neighborhood before it appeared at Miss Schmidt's door. Her spaniel was one of the dogs killed, and she was ready for the ape with a borrowed shotgun.

The charge which killed Jocko, also shattered 18 panes of glass in a greenhouse adjoining the home.

Dr. Grosvenor Is Dead at 91; Noted Educator

Dr. Edwin Augustus Grosvenor, 91, internationally noted educator, author and traveler, and father of Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, died yesterday at his home in Amherst, Mass.

Descended from the pioneer John Grosvenor, who left England upon the restoration of Charles II, and was killed by a blow from an Indian's tomahawk at Roxbury, Mass., in 1691, Dr. Grosvenor was graduated from Amherst College in 1867.

Immediately after receiving his diploma, he went to Constantinople as instructor of history in Robart College. Four years later he returned to America to study theology at Andover Seminary, and he was ordained in 1872.

He returned to the Near East and Robart College as professor of history, and lived in Constantinople until 1890. In 1873 he was married to Lilian Hovey Waters, daughter of Col. Asa Waters, of Millbury, Mass.

Taught at Amherst.

Dr. Grosvenor taught at Amherst College, and until 1914 held the chair of modern governments there.

Among his students were President Coolidge, Dwight W. Morrow and Supreme Court Justice Harlan Fiske Stone.

Throughout his career Dr. Grosvenor wrote constantly about the subjects he taught, becoming one of the foremost authorities on government in the world.

His most important work was a two-volume history and geography of Constantinople, published in 1895. It still is regarded as a standard authority on that city.

Edited Reference History.

He contributed more than 300 encyclopedia articles on European and Oriental subjects, edited the Reference History of the World in Webster's International Dictionary in 1909, and wrote "The Races of Europe," an encyclopedic resume of the racial makeup of all European peoples which occupied an entire issue of the Geographic Magazine.

For 12 years Dr. Grosvenor was president of the United States chapters of Phi Beta Kappa. He was a member of the Hellenic Philologic Syllogos of Constantinople, the Pannassos of Athens, the American Antiquarian Society, Psi Upsilon Fraternity, the Authors' Club of New York, Boston and London and the Cosmos Club here.

Another son besides Dr. Grosvenor, Asa Waters Grosvenor, of Fort Wayne, survives him. He also leaves ten grandchildren, including Melville Bell Grosvenor, and Mrs. Gertrude Grosvenor Blair, of Washington.

Old Finger Prints Clew in Baby Search

Detroit, Sept. 15 (AP).—Police tonight said the newest clew in their search for 20-month-old Harry Browe was a group of finger prints—found after a house burglary—which have been in police files since last June.

U. S. Discloses Harding Arms Parley Secret

Documents Just Made Public Show How President Jockeyed With Premier.

By the Associated Press.

Long-secret documents disclosed yesterday that anxiety lest Lloyd George "steal the show" caused President Harding to rush out announcements of the Washington Disarmament Conference before final plans had been perfected.

The documents were made public by the State Department after being held confidential for 15 years.

They consisted of correspondence between Charles Evans Hughes, then Secretary of State, and George Harvey, then Ambassador to London, concerning preliminary arrangements for the conference which met November 11, 1921.

Acting on information from Ambassador Harvey that Prime Minister Lloyd George planned to discuss the conference before the House of Commons on Monday, July 11, the President's announcement of it was sped to newspapers on Sunday for publication Monday morning.

Dates and times on messages revealed the cables between Washington and London were buzzing for several days beforehand as efforts were made to perfect arrangements and be first with the announcement.

Secretary Hughes instructed Ambassador Harvey at 4 p. m., July 8, to ascertain whether Great Britain would participate in a conference designed to limit armaments.

Four hours later Harvey cabled the department that Earl Curzon, minister for foreign affairs, had on July 5 requested him to ascertain if President Harding would call a conference.

Curzon told him, the Ambassador reported, that Lloyd George planned to discuss the proposed conference for a settlement of pacific and disarmament questions before the Commons.

Permitting Lloyd George to make the announcement, the Ambassador said, would allow him to achieve distinction and place President Harding in a position, "which I consider harmful and distasteful, of acting at the instigation of Lloyd George, thereby depriving himself of his rightful credit."

Harvey suggested "that this be forestalled" by the President making the announcement for Sunday or Monday newspapers, so that anything Lloyd George might say would merely repeat the President's announcement, with "an expression of the British government's acquiescence, as it should be."

The suggestion was followed.

U. S. Financing To States Put Near 21 Billion

the New Deal campaign committee of Texas:

"When this fund of $1,000,000,000 sent to Texas is analyzed, compared and contrasted, it presents an unusual picture. For instance, the Roosevelt-Garner Administration gave to Texas four thousand times the amount sought as a campaign contribution in this State, which is only $250,000.

"Expressed in another way, Texas is asked to give but one-fortieth of 1 per cent of the $1,000,000,000 toward the campaign war chest. Again it means $167 per capita, that sum going to every man, woman and child in Texas. Another side of the picture, the Washington Government gave to Texas ten times the total annual expenditures of the State government, for in round numbers the State government costs $100,000,000 a year."

The committee charged that Federal sums spent in Mississippi had been so large proportionately "that they have been interfering seriously with private employment. Only last week the WPA administrator there announced that all WPA projects in the Mississippi delta had been ordered suspended to provide cotton pickers for distressed plantation owners."

Whereas Virginia received in benefits less than three-fourths of the amount it returned in taxes, nearby Maryland was shown to have collected 293,889,196 in grants, loans and loans insured, against $208,539,449 it paid in taxes, a ratio of nearly 3 to 2.

Catholic Leader Urges United Drive on Reds

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 15 (AP).—Archbishop Aloysius Gerken, of Santa Fe, N. Mex., urged members and non-Catholics to unite against communism in an address to the Catholic Central Verein of America here today. He warned that Reds are more strongly organized than the church, and are working harder to realize their ends.

Frank Blied, of Madison, Wis., was chosen president by acclamation after constitutional election rules were suspended, and Henry B. Dielmann, San Antonio attorney, and John Eibeck, of Pittsburgh, Pa., incumbent, withdrew.

French Accuse 2 Arms Firms Of Faulty Work

Prosecution of Schneider Co. and Second Concern Is Authorized.

Paris, Sept. 15 (AP).—French officials announced tonight the government had decided to prosecute Schneider & Co., the famous arms manufacturer, on charges of poor work on armaments for France.

Similar charges were announced against another arms manufacturer.

Marx Dormoy, undersecretary in the premier's office, said the manufacturers would be prosecuted for "making false dies," but Minister of the Interior Roger Salengro explained the charges would be based on "bungling" work.

The factory at Creusot, headed by Eugene Schneider, is among those scheduled for nationalization under a new law.

Prosecution Authorized.

The cabinet authorized him to start prosecution.

The Schneider works makes guns, while the other firm implicated in the affair manufactures torpedo tubes.

Meanwhile, Premier Leon Blum, declining to concede defeat in his efforts to check the threat of a general textile strike, called successive meetings of employers' and workers' representatives at Lille for tomorrow.

With employers refusing to accept government arbitration, textile employes' leaders threatened to "organize 100,000 militant workers in Lille to support the 35,000 "folded arms" strikers there and compel the owners to put into effect a 40-hour week.

Informed persons said Socialist Premier Blum hoped to arrange conciliation before the widespread walkouts assumed nation-wide proportions.

Police on Guard.

Strong police reinforcements were stationed in Lille, particularly around public buildings, to prevent possible disorders as public employes warned they might occupy their offices. They were supporting the Government's attempt to get the employers to talk terms.

Sixteen thousand employes walked out in the Vosges department. At Thaon-Les-Vosges nonstriking dyers fought pickets until police and mobile guards dispersed them.

The union declared textile workers' pay was "notoriously insufficient," and insisted the government participate in any settlement.

Slaying Inquiry In China Barred By Army Group

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Sept. 15.—Defiant members of the old Nineteenth Route army, valiant defenders of Shanghai four years ago, tonight were reported blocking both Japanese and Chinese attempts to investigate the mob killing of a Japanese national at Pakhoi.

While China's foreign minister and Japan's ambassador conferred at Nanking on this and a preceding, similar incident, one native newspaper reported the veterans of the Shanghai siege already had clashed with a Japanese naval landing party.

Other sources termed this report "premature." A half-dozen Japanese warships stood off the troubled south China sector, determined at all odds "to protect Japanese interests."

Shigeru Kawagoe, Japan's Ambassador to China, indicated his country's concern over the incidents. He said they were regarded not as isolated or spontaneous outbursts, but as the fruit of virulent anti-Japanese sentiment deliberately fomented throughout China.

This feeling, Kawagoe declared, "must be eradicated before an improvement in relations between the two nations is possible."

In a two-hour conversation with Gen. Chang Chun, Chinese foreign minister, he declared Tokyo holds the national Chinese government responsible for the death of two Japanese and expects settlement.

There were two incidents. A riot of anti-Japanese demonstrators at Chengtu last month was followed within two weeks by the slaying of a Japanese drug store proprietor at Pakhoi, Kawagoe declared.

Chang Chun declared the national government was ready to make "reasonable amends" and admitted anxiety lest the incidents at Chengtu and Pakhoi prejudice Sino-Japanese relations.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

United States Department of Agriculture presents its orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Walter Bauer, in a concert in the south building auditorium. Program: Symphony No. 2 in B minor (Borodin), Andante Cantabile movement from String Quartet in D (Chaikovski), "Gopak" and "A Night on Bald Mountain" (Mousorgski), "Music Box" (Lyadov), selection from "Tsar Saltan" (Rimski-Korsakov).

That this young volunteer orchestra is receiving the encouragement it deserves was evident last night in the attendance, which left few observable vacancies in the hall. It is upon interest of this kind that the amateur spirit thrives and grows apace, and the organization is definitely showing the beneficial results of a friendly fostering. In the most ambitious program which it has attempted thus far, its playing showed an increased integration and an improved quality of tone.

While there has been a gain in assurance, the esprit de corps is still subject to occasional lapses which muddy the tone-color at unpredictable moments. The string choirs, for example, did commendable work in the familiar slow movement from Chaikovski's D major quartet, playing with unanimity of timbres and steadiness of phrasing. But in Lyadov's "Music Box," where short phrases and pizzicati abound, there were quarter-tone discrepancies in pitch and a looseness of texture.

The Borodin symphony was given a performance which had vitality and a genuine zest. There was doubtless a prudential motive in Dr. Bauer's omission of the second movement, that pyrotechnical scherzo which makes heavy demands upon skilled fingers and calls for a horn player of untiring virtuosity. Its absence withdrew a brilliant section from the symphony, but with the odd result that there was a closer consistency of mood.

Borodin, who was a composer by avocation and spent six years on this symphony in the intervals of his scientific work in medicine, performed an unusual feat in the writing. Within the strict limits of the classic form he compressed material of the most explosive sort. The themes have the energy and driving power of semibarbaric music which presents the taming hand, yet they have been mastered into orderly behavior without the breaking of their proud spirit.

Hull Advocates World Trading As Bar to War

Revival on New Basis Best Way to Assure Peace, He Tells Group.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 15.—Revival of international trade was held forth by Secretary of State Cordell Hull tonight as a means of dissipating the war clouds he saw gathering on the world horizon.

Asserting a "great opportunity awaits great leadership," he said:

"The rebuilding of international trade offers a splendid opportunity for governments to improve the conditions of their people and to assure them the necessary means of acquiring the essentials of well-being and the raw materials for production.

"If this result can be achieved, one of the fertile causes of dissention and possible war would be weakened or removed."

Secretary Hull, speaking at a dinner of the Good Neighbor League, stressed good neighborliness as the guiding principle of the Present Administration in its foreign dealings.

He said the "disturbance of spirit and upset of relations" that have taken place in the community of nations were due mainly to economic troubles and declared:

"This Government has taken the lead in trying to bring about changes in the international trade situation which would improve conditions everywhere."

As a result of new trade agreements, he said, "the vast decline in our foreign trade has ceased." Foreign sales during 1935 exceeded those of 1932, the lowest year, he said, by $671,000,000. He predicted a further increase in 1936.

Without mentioning any of them by name, he said "strong nations have chosen to proceed in disregard of" the Kellogg anti-war pact.

"It is for the statesmen to continue their effort to effect security by new agreements which will prove more durable than those that have been broken," he went on. "This Government would welcome that achievement."

Cost of Living In Washington Gains 1.8 Pct.

Food Prices Increase 5.3 Pct. in 3 Months; Survey Reveals.

The cost of living in Washington increased generally in the three-month period from April 15 to July 15, a survey report issued yesterday by the Department of Labor revealed.

General rise in prices here averaged 1.8 per cent. This included a gain of 5.3 per cent in food; .2 per cent in clothing; .6 per cent in rent, and .1 per cent in household goods.

There was a decrease of 2.8 per cent in the District's collective fuel and light bill.

The same survey showed that Baltimore had experienced a general trend upward of 1.2 per cent; Richmond, 1.8 per cent, and Norfolk, 1.3 per cent.

Throughout the Nation the upward trend in rents was general, according to the survey. Twenty-six cities reported increases in rentals, resulting in an average increase of .8 per cent for the country as a whole.

Largest rise occurred in Denver, Colo., where it was .27, but increases of between 2 and 2.2 per cent also were reported for Portland, Oreg.; Detroit, Buffalo and Pittsburgh.

Food price advances were general, due, according to the report, to increases in the price of potatoes, fresh vegetables and fruits and butter and eggs.

Firms Contest Senators' Right To Seize Wires

Suit Seeks to Prevent Surrender of Telegrams to La Follette.

By the Associated Press.

The right of the La Follette Senatorial committee to seize private telegrams in its investigation of civil liberties violations in industrial disputes was challenged in the Federal District Court here yesterday.

A suit seeking to prevent the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies from turning over records and messages to the committee was filed by the Railway Audit and Inspection Co., of Philadelphia, and the Central Industrial Service Co., a Delaware corporation.

W. W. Groves, president of both firms, and 11 employes and officers joined in filing the injunction plea.

Hearing Slated Monday.

Justice Joseph W. Cox ordered the telegraph companies to appear for a hearing Monday, one day before the committee is scheduled to resume its inquiry into activities of the firms.

Business sources reported the committee had subpenaed telegrams sent and received by the Groves companies, and other involved in the inquiry, since January 1, 1935.

In a similar suit, brought by Silas Strawn, Chicago attorney, during the last session of Congress, Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of the same court, forbade the telegraph companies to turn over records in response to a subpena by the Black Senate committee, investigating lobbying activities.

Indictment of Groves and five officers and employes of his firms on charges of "contumacy" was asked by the La Follette committee recently when they failed to appear to testify. The Federal grand jury has not yet reported on the case.

In yesterday's suit the complainants contended the Senate committee had "neither power nor authority" to conduct "a general inquisition and investigation and unlimited fishing expedition" into their private affairs.

Individuals who joined in the suit were Robert S. Judge, of New York, former attorney for the companies; G. E. Ivey, of Georgia, present attorney; W. Boone Grove, L. Douglas Rice, H. D. Blair, Henry M. O'Blemess and Walter C. Moore, all of Pennsylvania; Foster Strader, of New York; Harold Bomboy, of Louisiana, and Clyde Byrd and F. W. Bender, of Missouri.

2 Bandit Suspects Held for Inquiry

Two colored men arrested shortly after holdups yesterday morning were being questioned by police last night.

Rose Fisher, 33, told police two bandits tried to rob her shortly after she opened her shop at 520 First street southeast. Mrs. Fisher said she screamed and the men fled. Police arrested a suspect a few minutes later.

Arthur Holt, manager of a gasoline station at Third and M streets southeast identified a suspicious looking colored man as the bandit who robbed him of $10 Saturday night. Holt said the man was loitering around the station yesterday and he called the police.

No charges were placed against either of the men.

Brown Asks Data On Graft Rumors

Reports from all police Inspectors and commanding officers of the precincts on rumors of alleged graft in the ranks of the department have been requested by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, it was revealed yesterday.

Maj. Brown stated he has ordered all commanding officers to investigate rumors of policemen accepting graft from underworld characters in co-operation with the investigation being made by Capt. Ira E. Keck, assistant chief of detectives, and Detective Lieut. Floyd Truscott.

Maj. Brown also denied that Capt. Keck had submitted a report to him of the investigation which has been under way for the last two weeks. The investigation grew out of rumors implying that police protection was being supplied members of a notorious numbers mob in the city.

Officials yesterday indicated that no policemen are under suspicion and that the investigation so far has proven fruitless. Maj. Brown said he is expecting a report within within the next few days.

Simple Match Test Explains Amazing Economy of Crane Boiler

If you place your hand beside the flame of a match it will feel warm. But if you hold your hand over the flame it's hot.

That's why Crane engineers put 50% more heat-absorbing surface directly above the heating gases in a Crane Boiler than you'll find in the average boiler. Patented baffles direct the water over the hottest portion of the boiler.

More of the heat you pay for in fuel bills is carried to the rooms of your home. A lot more.

"We used to have to force our boiler to heat the Winn Theater. Now with our new Crane Boiler it is very easy and we burn less fuel in doing it. It is a pleasure to have such a fine boiler."

No Solution.

The American Federation of Government Employes has undoubtedly weakened its corporate influence by the manner in which it has met the crisis of the Detroit convention. It is true, of course, that differences between the more conservative groups and the so-called New Deal lodges have kept the federation in a perturbed state for months. But to meet that problem by ousting the minority is a confession of weakness that the conservative leadership should have made every effort to avoid.

Following the split in the American Federation of Labor, this division within the A. F. G. E. raises a most serious issue for organized labor. Several substantial lodges, not counting dubious WPA units, have been cut off from the A. F. G. E. for non-cooperation, supplemented by silly charges of communism. In a really democratic organization no such drastic penalties would have been possible. Associations of workers must abide by majority rule, but in a true democracy that has never meant and never can mean the persecution of dissenters. Rather it implies protection of the fundamental rights of the minority while the majority policy is being pursued.

If the A. F. of L. and its constituent organizations intend to make a practice of eliminating groups that do not see eye to eye with the official hierarchy, the labor movement will soon be hopelessly weakened. It is not improbable that the ousted lodges of the A. F. G. E. will follow the example of the Committee for Industrial Organization by setting up a rival organization. If so, its policies are likely to be more and not less "radical" than have been the objectives of the offending lodges. In the end, therefore, the cause of Government employes in general is likely to suffer.

No doubt the so-called New Deal lodges have shown a lack of deference to A. F. G. E. policies and procedure. Certainly many of their members are inexperienced in trade union traditions. Nor have they yet clearly drawn the essential distinction between an association of Government employes and a labor union. Shortcomings of this sort could be corrected, however, without resort to arbitrary action on the part of the older lodges.

Any effective organization devoted to the interests of Government employes must be representative in its personnel as well as flexible in its policies. If some groups are denied participation in existing agencies the prestige of the latter is certain to be impaired. For divided counsel among advocates of a cause is seldom effective, in Congress or elsewhere. Moreover, a "purge" of this sort raises a question as to whether even the viewpoints of those remaining within the organization are adequately represented. For the suppression of dissent is characteristic of dictatorship and not of democracy.

The problem which gave rise to this controversy is now far more acute than it was before the convention began. By ousting these lodges the A. F. G. E. has merely sidestepped the issue and publicized its executive deficiencies.

Gabrilowitsch.

The death of Ossip Gabrilowitsch is a shock repercussive throughout that vaguely delimited part of society known as the artistic world. No graph can be devised by statistical experts to define the loss in esthetic values which is now apparent to every musician and to every layman for whom music is a solace and an inspiration. A great practitioner of the art has disappeared from his honorable place on the recital stage and the conductor's podium. He leaves a vacancy which no other can fill, for the individuality of an artist cannot be replaced by the apprentice system.

By the accident of birthplace, Gabrilowitsch was a Russian; by his own choice, he was an American citizen; by the judgment of his fellowmen, he was an international poet whose medium of expression was the universal language of music. The peoples of many countries enjoyed his artistry and had their claims upon his gratitude for the triumphs accorded him. Americans, however, have held him in singular affection because of his marriage to the daughter of Samuel L. Clemens, an alliance that peculiarly bound him to the autochthonous traditions of the Nation.

Nowhere more subtly than in musical interpretation is the character of an artist revealed. In his pianoforte playing, and in his conducting of orchestral works, Gabrilowitsch disclosed the sensitiveness to beauty, the delicacy of phrasing, and the keenness of spiritual intuition associated with the genuine poetic temperament. His creative talent, manifested in his few finely polished compositions, was of a parallel quality. The specious, the artificial and the superficial were foreign to his nature. A sincere artist, he had the simplicity and the fine fiber of integrity which endeared him to those who appreciate true greatness.

The Maine Barometer.

While many will view the results of the Maine elections as a conquest of Holland by the Dutch, Administration strategists will be forced to make several important concessions in reaching such a conclusion. Not the least of these is the way in which a State delegation of two Democrats and one Republican in the House of Representatives has been changed overnight into a delegation of three Republicans and no Democrats. This shows how easily the present top-heavy Administration majority in Congress can be cut down, and will greatly encourage minority workers in dozens of close Congressional districts throughout the country.

This psychological effect, moreover, will extend to the voting for the Presidential candidates. The fact that it is exceptional for Maine to be anything but solidly Republican is overshadowed by the impressive evidence of Administration vulnerability. One of the most important effects of this preliminary test of public opinion is its resounding explosion of the myth that Roosevelt cannot be beaten. The Republican landslide in Maine will undoubtedly shake Democratic confidence in many States where heretofore the political horizon was viewed complacently.

This will be the more true because the subsidy policy, on which the Administration is relying for many votes, does not appear to have checked the swing of the pendulum against the New Deal in Maine. The President's assurance of continued support for the Passamaquoddy project, made during his recent visit to Representative Brewster's constituency, did not prevent the latter from rolling up a majority in the proportion of 11 to 7 over his Democratic opponent.

While the amount of Federal funds forwarded to Maine under the New Deal has been relatively small, the total, counting all grants, allotments and loans, had reached the sum of over $150,000,000 by April of this year. Obviously not many voters have been won over by this largesse, which also has its nation-wide implications.

Recognizing the probability of a generally adverse outcome the Democratic high command concentrated its efforts behind the senatorial candidacy of Gov. Brann, an able and popular executive who was further helped by his anxiety to divorce himself from many of the undertakings sponsored by the Roosevelt Administration. Yet in the upshot Brann ran some 5,000 votes behind Senator White, although in 1932 the former had won the gubernatorial election by 2,358 votes and in 1934 by 23,503 votes. The same sharp turn of sentiment in the last two years is indicated by the fact that the 1934 plurality of Senator Hale (Republican) was only 1,701, a margin which Senator White has increased threefold, though on a substantially larger vote.

The Democratic National Committee can take cold comfort from the fact that the unofficial polls have been showing Maine as the most strongly Republican of all the States, thereby concluding that from the Administration viewpoint the worst is now known. It may also be pointed out that the last poll of the Institute of Public Opinion showed Landon leading Roosevelt by two to one in Maine, while none of the Republican candidates triumphed by so great a majority on Monday. From that might follow the argument that if the Institute of Public Opinion poll has slightly overestimated Landon strength in all States, as apparently in Maine, many States now depicted as on the border-line are really safely Democratic, and with them the election.

But this argument would be very difficult to substantiate. In November, 1932, Maine went for Hoover by nearly 40,000 although that September it had given a small margin to Brann as Governor. If the same trend rules when local issues give place to the Presidential vote this year, the Institute of Public Opinion figures, which should be watched even more closely from now on, may easily be confirmed. They are already substantiated on the relatively insignificant strength of Townsendites and other minor groups which showed themselves, as forecast, to be a negligible factor in the Maine election.

The records do not support the slogan that the Nation in November follows the lead given by Maine seven weeks or so earlier. But the Republican Party does not need to claim as much as that in order to feel well satisfied over the indications in Monday's voting. For none can deny that they represent a groundswell in favor of the Landon candidacy, and a very much closer Presidential campaign than Mr. Farley has heretofore been willing to admit.

England Runs True To Form.

For "unlawfully and wilfully producing near the person of the King a pistol with intent to alarm His Majesty," a year of hard labor has been allotted to the probably unbalanced man who threw an unloaded revolver into the path of Edward VIII two months ago. In passing sentence, the court chose to ignore the accused's labored assertion that he had been bribed by an unnamed foreign power to murder the King. Rather, it preferred to view him as a psycopathic case. Presumably, McMahon will receive psychiatric attention while in prison and, if justified by examination, a quiet transfer to a sanatorium will be in order.

Thus the incident closes, without fuss or fanfare, in typical British fashion. With dignity and dispatch, what might have ballooned into a prolonged sensation has been disposed of to everyone's satisfaction. Even newspapers which referred to the man as an "assassin" before he had had a hearing were kept closely in check for the remainder of the trial by the imposition of fines amounting to several thousand dollars.

The contrast with what might have been McMahon's fate in another land is striking. Had he been in Germany, for example, the summary execution of the poor Dutchman, Van der Lubbe, hounded into a "confession" of burning the Reichstag, suggests what would have happened. Or, had he been in Russia, the mass slaughter of the Kirov conspirators and, more recently, the alleged Trotskyist plotters, leaves little to the imagination as to what the sentence for "alarming" Stalin would be.

The difference in treatment is at bottom one of political systems. The tyrants of Germany and Russia rule by terrorism. The monarch of England, who reigns without ruling, is not feared but loved. To draw a pistol against him is not the act of an assassin but of a fool.

The Larger Neutrality.

In that war of words now raging in Europe between fascism and communism, with Germany and Russia as the principal protagonists, Americans and others living in democratic countries are likely to find themselves between two fires.

Communism, because it is at the moment on the defensive, has ostensibly shelved its program of world revolution and instead is now appealing to all anti-fascist elements to align themselves under the banner of the Popular Front. The fascists, particularly of the German variety, have declared a holy war on communism and are bidding for the sympathy and support of all individuals and groups who hate Soviet Russia and its system.

At bottom both Russia and Germany are primarily motivated by nationalist considerations. But the struggle between them is rapidly developing into a war of dogmas that cuts across all national lines and is therefore the more dangerous and inflammatory. History clearly shows that no wars are more ferocious than wars of religion. In a primitive and savage sense this is exactly what communism and fascism have become to their respective devotees.

In this struggle where do American interests lie? There are many in this country who, blinded by their fear and hatred of communism, are prepared to play Hitler's game. There are others whose equally understandable hatred of the Nazis is such that they are only too willing to advocate support of Moscow against Berlin. But if America is to keep itself out of the European maelstrom, Americans must scrupulously refrain from becoming in any sense the allies of either.

Certainly, so far as Americans are concerned, there is little to choose between the two despotic systems. There are great superficial differences between the brown tyranny and the red. But their similarities are far more numerous. In particular they are alike in their intense antipathy toward that liberalism which is of the very essence of the democratic system. Both regard the individual as mere pawns of the all-powerful state. Neither tolerates freedom of expression or freedom of inquiry. Neither is prepared to brook the rivalry of creed or give any leeway to conscience.

If communism is openly atheistical, fascism, particularly the Nazi variety, is no less destructive of true religion. By making religion the lackey and tool of the state it would keep the church as a hollow shell while destroying its spirit.

Not even with respect to the attitude toward private property is there such a difference between communism and fascism as some believe. For while communism does not recognize private property, except for personal belongings, and fascism presumably does, fascist states so drastically regiment business, foreign trade, exchange, allocation of raw materials, freedom of movement, etc., as to make the differences between their system and that of communism one of degree rather than of kind.

Those who believe in democracy not only have a right but a duty to regard both systems with cold antipathy, and above all to avoid being lured into supporting either one against the other. Never was this sense of neutrality more essential than now. Americans as one man are determined that in the struggle which is brewing on the other side of the Atlantic we should keep out.

Whether it will be possible for us, under any circumstances, actually to stay out of another world conflict is by no means certain. But the neutral position will prove even more difficult to maintain if Americans align themselves with either Moscow or Berlin, against the other; if they allow their antagonism toward communism or fascism insidiously to undermine their faith in democracy.

The customer proved most exacting and the assistant was growing impatient.

"Now are you sure this is genuine crocodile skin?" the customer inquired, critically examining a handbag.

"Quite sure, madam," was the reply. "You see, I know the man who shot that crocodile."

"It looks rather dirty," remarked the customer.

"Well, yes," replied the assistant, "that's where the animal struck the ground when it fell out of the tree."

The Needling System

The presence of the head of the Republican Party brought the local Republican population down to the railroad station, and while they were gathered around the tailboard of the train, listening to the oratory, Mr. Fred Tisdale, a Democrat out of Union City, Tenn., went among them making wagers on the election. Mr. Tisdale admits that he caught a large number of Republicans in a weak moment and even took some at even money.

"It was the best sport I have had this year," Mr. Tisdale said. "It was like casting to a tankful of trout at a fish hatchery. I got some wonderful Wall street brokers from down around Greenwich, several small-arms manufacturers, a yacht-club commodore who used to be president of a bond house and quite a number of retired capitalists. The retired capitalists were rather scrubby and thin, but the type is disappearing for one reason or another, and you seldom see good fat ones any more.

"For a moment," Mr. Tisdale said, "I thought I had a big Liberty Leaguer, but I wasn't quite sure of his markings, and he turned out to be nothing but a Hoover Minute Man, although very good of his type.

"'Mr. Landon is a nice-looking man for a Republican,' I said. 'Do you think he has a chance?'

* * * *

"'Chance!' he said. 'On election day the true Americans of this great country of ours will turn out in their millions and repudiate the evil folly of the New Deal.'

"'I don't suppose you are confident enough to make a little bet on that, are you, brother?' I inquired. 'Or if so you probably would want prohibitive odds.'

"There is an art to this, like playing a big fish," Mr. Tisdale said. "You don't want to sock it to them at the first nibble, although it is pretty hard to keep them off the hook when you find them listening to Mr. Landon in the flesh. The presence of Mr. Landon affects them something like a jacklight. It blinds them and affects their judgment, and I found moments when they were fighting among themselves to get hooked.

"When I mentioned prohibitive odds my Hoover Minute Man thrashed around, and for a minute I thought he was going to give me odds, but I finally hooked him at even money."

Mr. Tisdale's system is called the needling system, and he has been needling Republicans for the last six months, starting the conversation gently with a pitying remark that it is too bad the Republicans seem to have no chance.

* * * *

Your correspondent also attended the Stamford ceremonies but refrained from wagering on the ground that the Republicans were swarming, so to speak, and everybody knows that when bees are swarming it is possible to saw off an entire limb of a tree on which they have swarmed and capture a whole swarm without resistance.

Mr. Tisdale, however, has no such sporting scruples.

"Nuts to that!" said Mr. Tisdale. "The Republicans used to saw me off year after year when I was just a dumb Southern Democrat and too ignorant to know anything about odds. I even got sawed off on John W. Davis and Charlie Bryan, and if the Republicans had had any sportsmanship they would have turned me loose on the ground that the election was no contest."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

The Plea of N. S. P.

("Inmates of Nevada State Penitentiary are expressing concern because Wallace Bozzell, the prison's star baseball pitcher, may get a parole after serving 13 years for murder. He won 149 out of 181 games and bats better than .300."—News item.)

Don't pardon Wallie Bozzell
Or give him a parole:
His place is here in prison.
Oh, keep him in the hole!
He may deserve his freedom
And rescue from disgrace,
But keep him in the hoosegow—
For he's our pitching ace!

He's been a model inmate
Throughout his time in stir;
Parole be more than merits,
But bar him from it, sir!
For freedom he is pining,
But do not free this lad,
For he's the hottest twirler
This bastille ever had.

More than 2,000 strikeouts—
His record's there to see;
He also bats .300 . . .
You'd dare to set him free!
Oh, loose some other felon
Or call for volunteers,
But never free a pitcher
Who stands 'em on their ears!

We know he's learned his lesson
And will go straight and true;
He's penitent, and surely
With evil ways is through.
Fair play would bring him freedom
But keep him breaking rocks,
For N. S. P. feels safer
When he is in the box.

Behind these walls he's languished
Year after weary year,
And now there beckons to him
Sweet liberty, so dear;
He yearns to get his papers
And from this dungeon slip,
But hold him we demand it!
His curved ball is a pip

His only crime was murder,
A sordid deed and flat.
And we admit it's tough to Lock up a guy for that;
But this is an exception—
What could this prison do,
With two down, three on bases
And count of three and two?

A Woman's Reply.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Thumbs down on the "Amendment Proposal" of Mr. Pro Bono Publico!

In answer to his first plank, does he not know that "idleness is the beginning of vice?" Thirty or forty hours of work per week is not enough to keep the mass of humanity out of trouble. I have gotten ahead a little by working, when others were sitting down resing.

In answer to his second proposal, let me say that women have found that a man offers uncertain and indifferent security to a woman.

Either married women should keep their jobs, or some form of marital insurance should be worked out to protect them—if they relinquish their work upon marrying—against the hazards of a broken marriage.

More and more, State laws are being revamped to abolish alimony—which undoubtedly has been greatly abused—so that a woman, who is without independent means, has the alternative of enduring the insults and mistreatment of a man in order to have bread to eat, or of going forth into the world to find work, often at an age when most positions are closed to her. Five or ten years of cooking, tending stoves and babies and stretching her energy to cover 18 hours of duty in the twenty-four, does not particularly fit her to make a comeback in the business or professional world.

It is not the conviction that women will disrupt the economic life of the Nation that causes men to froth at the mouth over their earning a salary. An X-ray of masculine motives would reveal that one of the underlying reasons for men objecting to women earning is that when a woman earns she is removed from the domination of men.

The third plank in Mr. PBP's platform I reject also. Though my children will not have to work until they finish college, I want them to learn to work as soon as they can carry a paper, or pull a saw, or fill out a sales slip. I'm not raising any dandelions who can't pitch in and do the jobs that have to be done. Eighteen years of age is too old to learn to work.

Colonies' Worth To Germany.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

You say that if Germany should regain all her prewar colonies her economic problem would still remain serious. You are indeed conservative. If Germany regained her colonies she would still pay the world market price for colonial raw materials except as she might exploit the colonists and the natives by forcing them to take lower prices.

Even if Germany succeeded in stealing these materials from the natives without payment, they would not on the present basis be sufficient to solve Germany's difficulties. In 1929, for instance, if Germany had received all the exports of the former German colonies they would have constituted only 1.5 per cent of her total imports. This amount is plainly insufficient to affect the situation greatly, considering that Germany herself produces several times as much raw material as she imports.

It would appear probable that even if Germany received the total exports of the former German colonies—and no colony sends all of its products to the mother country unless it is either forced or given a price premium—they would not supply more than one-half of 1 per cent of the raw materials consumed by German industry.

Landon In Church.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In The Post of September 14 we read the story of Gov. Landon's one hour in church, in Portland, Me., the day preceding. We are informed at the start that "Gov. Alf M. Landon laughed right out loud in church this morning;" that in connection with publicity he was "visibly annoyed," that he "motioned impatiently."

Little things? Yes. Yet if Gov. Landon made so many faux pas in one hour we leave it to readers to get a pencil and calculate the number he would be likely to make in the 20,384 waking hours he would logically put in as President should he move his baggage into the White House this winter.

It has been suggested by various readers of your worthy paper that the number would equal, if not exceed, the number of dollars Roosevelt has spent in delivering the country from imminent revolution.

Politics And The Supreme Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Partisan critics urge against the re-election of President Roosevelt that he would pack the Supreme Court with New Deal judges during his extended term. But would not Gov. Landon likewise appoint reactionaries to such vacancies should he have the opportunity?

It is unthinkable that any President would place on the bench a judge whose opinion might have decisive weight against the political and economic principles in which he vitally believes. Imagine Abraham Lincoln selecting a Supreme Court judge, however learned and upright, who did not believe in the principle of the Union. Indeed, the great emancipator made no scruples of playing politics with a Supreme Court appointment in at least one instance.

The interrelation of the Supreme Court and politics is well illustrated in the instance of the Electoral Commission to decide the Hayes-Tilden contest in 1877. The decision of the nine justices on the commission, five of whom were Republicans and four Democrats, split along the line of political cleavage. Did it merely happen so?

Former President Taft, after a political career in partisan politics, was appointed to the Supreme Bench by a co-partisan President. Mr. Hughes left politics for a place on the Supreme Bench, which he resigned to re-enter politics as a Presidential candidate on the Republican ticket. After being defeated for the Presidency he was reappointed to the Supreme Bench and assigned to the chief justiceship by President Coolidge.

Both Landon and Knox began their public careers as ardent disciples of Theodore Roosevelt, which discipleship they have up to now not expressly renounced. This premier of progressive advocated the recall of judges if their decision failed to sanction the contemporary will of the people expressed at the polls. Indeed, the Constitution, by placing the appointment and confirmation of judges in the hands of the President and the Senate, allows ample leeway for the invasion of the judiciary by politics.

The re-election of President Roosevelt would mean that the American people uphold the New Deal and expect the Supreme Court to sustain that verdict. On the other hand, if Landon is elected it means that the electorate is opposed to the New Deal and expects the Supreme Court to reverse it.

The appointment of judges whether by Roosevelt or Landon favorable to the principles which they espouse and which the country expects is no reflection upon the patriotism, integrity or honor of either candidate.

Choice Of Dictatorships.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In The Post of September 12 appears an editorial entitled: "Germany and Russia." The editorial, among other things, says: "Actually there is precious little to choose between communism and nazism."

As a patriotic American, it is most disquieting for me to note, in these troublous times when the people need all the honest facts placed before them, dispassionately, in order that they might think clearly, that The Post's hatred for Hitler should cause it to lose sight of all realities and make the indefensible assertion quoted above. Instead of frankly recognizing the fact that Hitler, in this instance, in attacking communism was right and supporting him in his attack upon communism, the common enemy of all civilization and religion, The Post tries to discredit Hitler's motives by advancing the poor argument that nazism is scarcely any better than communism.

And yet the editor of The Post knows that if we had communism in the United States all private ownership of property would be abolished and so even The Post building and all, would no longer belong to its present owner, but to the Communist government of the United States. Would the editor of The Post like that? He also knows that all religion would be abolished in the United States and the church buildings either destroyed or put to secular uses. Would the editor of The Post like that?

In Nazi Germany they still have private ownership of property and the church buildings have not been destroyed or secularized, as in Communist Russia. Is not that a tremendous difference in favor of human liberty?

The Ludke Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have been following the Ludke case for quite a while. There are two points to look at and either one is against them.

1. Mr. Ludke's quotation (which seemingly keeps him from honoring his country's flag) is from Moses. He uttered those words in desperation when he saw how completely his people had forgotten God and lived only in worldly amusements and sin. There was no well-regulated country, with a people living in liberty, happiness and plenty. They had been in slavery and he had liberated them. Their ungrateful conduct was the cause of his outcry, which today seems to get misinterpreted so often.

2. In Matthew 22 we find the people bickering, as they are today. Jesus had enough knowledge of the hypocrisy of his fellow men. His answer was quite simple: "Give the emperor what is the emperor's and give God what is God's." If He were living today, He would have no objections to our saluting the flag. Honoring the flag of our country is not taking anything away from God. If this country gives us our gratitude by saluting the flag, lead a free and happy life, we should be only too glad to express our gratitude by saluting the flag.

If Ludke does not like to do that, he should leave this country and try some other place, where they kill the people for their belief in God.

The Republican Nominee.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is to our own welfare as well as the welfare of the Nation to select the best man as the next President of the United States. It seems probable that the election of Gov. A. M. Landon will not only promote general prosperity but will also assist us to correlate a sound financial basis for our government so that we can forge ahead to new achievements and brighter days to come.

When President Roosevelt met him during the drought conference some time ago, he claimed that G. O. P. presidential nominee "is a very fine, charming gentleman." I presume every voter thinks the same.

Who's Bourgeois Now?

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

SO you're a member of the middle class, are you? How, exactly, do you know?

Franklin Charles Palm's study ("The Middle Classes: Then and Now," the Macmillian Co., $3.50) is a serious, well-written, historical sketch of the middle classes which, even in our democracy where class distinction used to be frowned upon, have always been considered the backbone of civilization. In it he answers the foregoing question, at least to his own satisfaction, and makes several pertinent observations that are suggestive and timely.

Mr. Palm begins his study with a quotation from Lord Macauley who, a little more than a century ago, wrote in the Edinburgh Review that "the higher and middling orders are the natural representatives of the human race." This explanation is today in dispute. The Soviet Union is a living denial of it, on the one hand; Germany and Italy give it equally the lie on the other; and in the United States there are forces at work which would negate it, if they have not already done so.

• • • •

WE can say this if we accept Mr. Palm's yardstick by which he measures the social stratum. He rejects the "how much theory," whereby ones status in society depends upon the amount of income earned. In its place he substitutes the more equitable "where from theory," in which society is divided on the basis of the economic source from which the individual derives his income. In the modern world the latter theory alone is tenable for the purposes of determining in which "class" one stands.

The "where from theory" allows us to divide mankind into three economic classes: (1) the capitalist, or upper class; (2) the lower or working class, and (3) the middle class, or the bourgeoisie. Class number one derives its income from "hereditary status, applied privilege, self-recognized superiority in intelligence and opportunity, control of the means of production and distribution." In other words—invested capital. At a rough estimate, Mr. Palm says this class comprises about 2 per cent of the people! "Looking about we can readily include bankers and financiers, industrialists, large stockholders, and great landowners—and possessors of vast wealth or great power" (synonymous terms).

Class number two is what we are coming more and more to call the proletariat and which includes more than 60 per cent of the world's people—the masses. "This group," says Mr. Palm, "defines itself by the negation of the capitalist principle; the working class is such because its income is derived from labor. A more inclusive way of putting it is to say that the working class consists of those persons who receive wages—the wage earners. Theirs is a stipulated income based on the sale of labor at a set price." (My italics.) Into this group fit factory workers, farmhands, machine operators, stenographers, clerks, reporters, teachers—those who wear dirty clothes and those who wear white collars and think, erroneously, that they are members of the middle class.

Class number three takes up the difference between the other groups. It stands between Scylla and Charybdis, between the devil and the deep blue sea, between Mr. Morgan and the bus driver who brought you to work this morning. Its members derive their income through a compromise: a combination of their own labor plus invested capital: the small business man, the farm owner, the professional man, the so-called executive, the minor manufacturer. Perhaps 30 per cent of the population falls into this category.

THUS economics determines social conditions, divides the people, makes the classes, causes most of the trouble in the world. And, of course, the above arbitrary division is not conclusive. "The hobgoblin of caste confuses the sober analyst of society," says Mr. Palm, and religion and politics distort the issue, making it ever the more difficult to divide whole peoples into categories. Mr. Palm, for example, does not include teachers in his second group: the reason being, of course, that for years teachers have refused to realize that they are "workers," having felt that they were "members of a profession." The prolonged depression has brought about a change there, and only the other day William Green welcomed reporters into the American Federation of Labor, an unthinkable thing 15 years ago when this Guild member was an $8-a-week cub.

"Sudden changes leave a disturbed scene," says Mr. Palm. "People have begun to view society through a concept significantly French: Liberty, Equality, Fraternity. Around this motto centers the instability of the class structure. In the present day it has taken another form through Marxian class concepts. Karl Marx's clarion cry: 'The history of mankind is the history of class struggles' has awakened a resounding echo and some people of today are beginning to think of a classless society, or rather a society of one class—the proletariat. With such a vision in mind, they actually hope to eliminate the opposing classes, the capitalist by annihilation and the bourgeoisie by conversion."

Karl Marx had a phrase for it. "The rich are becoming richer and the poor poorer; between the upper and the nether millstone, the middle class will be ground out!" And because recent events—senseless war, uncontrollable depressions, ruthless dictatorships, revolutions—have served to sharpen the perception of all three classes that they are in triangular conflict, those who know now that they will find no help from the upper class are aligning themselves with the proletariat. The process, of course, is not rapid and it is confused: some become Marxists, some join the Union Party, others hark to old Doc Townsend, and others are going to vote for Roosevelt again.

THE continuation of capitalism as we have known it and the advancement of the masses each depends upon which way the Middle Classes historically turn. With what Mr. Palm calls "pitiless logic" (Jowett once said logic is not a science, but a dodge, as Dr. Beard recently recalled), the leaders of the proletariat point out how virtually impossible it is to rise out of ones class and how much in common most would-be bourgeois have with the worker; both must work, or starve.

And these, Mr. Palm sums up in the term "subjective impulses": the bourgeois belief in education as power and an essential of democracy; his impartiality—and often "suicidal neutrality"—in politics; his willingness to be swayed by demagogues who beat upon his biases and inherited prejudices; his desire to be known as self-made and self-reliant; and his worship of money and financial success. For the outstanding characteristic of the middle class man is "acquisitiveness." In rational moments he may see through the indecencies of capitalism; but all the time he would be himself a capitalist—if he could. Wernar Sombart, in "Der Bourgeois," has brilliantly analyzed the characteristics of the bourgeois man and all through literature, before "Babbitt" and after "1919," his hopes and dreams and ambitions and cliches and bobgoblins have been made known to us all.

And the bourgeois, in essence, becomes the miniature capitalist. Upon this goal he builds his life, and it will be only when the thousands upon thousands of members of the middle class, who have no chance of realizing this goal, understand that they are not in reality members of the middle class after all, but workers who have only their labor to sell else they starve, that we will see a changed world. This probably will have to come before elimination of the capitalist, the 2 per cent which holds the power today.

• • • •

MR. PALM traces the history of the middle classes from somewhere around 3027 B. C., when Babbitt's genesis began in Babylonia, down through the New Deal. The story is fascinating and, as I said, filled with pertinent and suggestive historical observations, well documented. I would like to see every member of the middle class—or everyone who still thinks he is—read this book before next November. It ends with these words: "While most middle class men realise they are living in an era of change and that somehow they are out of step with the march of time, they fail to change their gait. Clinging desperately to the solid bourgeois virtues, especially the faith in liberty, they fail to look either to the right or left. Bewildered, stubborn, and resentful, they stumble on. Whither Bourgeoisie . . . ?"

Behind Senate Cloakroom Doors

A Former United States Senator Reminisces About Old Times.

By Robert C. Albright.

In a heavy-plushed Senate cloakroom they stand, telling stories. Jim Watson is the center of the group, and his great arms encompass the necks of two of his unbending colleagues. The story ends. Deep laughter rings through the cloakroom, and filters through open doors into the solemn Senate chamber.

Jim Watson knew them—the stories, the statesmen and the politicians. For nearly half a century he was one with Washington. For at least half of that time he was a member of the inner circle that shaped the course of political, party and United States history. Now in his memoirs he punctures a hole in the curtain through which, in retrospect, we may peep, and even listen. And what we see and hear through the curtain is not always edifying.

In "As I Knew Them," he speaks frankly and fully, if not completely. If some of these anecdotes lack the spice and the confidences of those informal cloakroom chats, perhaps it is because "some of the richest and rarest things ever said by men in public life, some of the most pithy and pointed, some that expressed a whole argument by their mere stating, were of such a nature that I cannot include them in my narrative."

Watson served in Congress under eight Presidents. He knew Harrison, and saw Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Arthur. Politically he was a regular; socially, a regular fellow. He was Republican whip in the House, and leader of his party in the Senate, until he slipped into political oblivion in the 1932 Roosevelt landslide. Such is the "fleeting and ephemeral character of fame," on which the former Senator has occasion to reflect. When Watson went out, a new school of politics came in. Names, faces and theories have changed, but basically the methods are the same.

THE UNITED STATES SENATE CHAMBER.

This is no mere book of nostalgic reminiscence. Rather, it is the "inside story" of twentieth century politics and Government, rambling at times, but readably glued together with Watsonian anecdotes that reflect the hearty, back-slapping personality of the man. Historians will find it prolific with source material. Practical politicians will find it a handbook of information on how the game has been played. And casual readers should find it briskly entertaining.

Here for the first time the cryptic Coolidge "I do not choose to run" statement is elaborated and explained. Watson was actively opposed to Hoover's candidacy. He wanted Coolidge to run again. This is what Coolidge prophetically told him, in part:

"I fitted into the situation that existed right after the war, but I might not fit into the next one. Immediately following the terrible turmoil of that conflict, the people wanted rest, and that is what I was naturally adapted to give them and did give them • • • But a different condition now confronts us • • • We have so many forces in the country opposed to big business generally, or to certain lines of business especially, that their combined forces can break down any political party. And so something affirmative must be suggested, and I do not feel that I am the man to fill that sort of position or to undertake to meet the demand occasioned by that situation. Somebody can do it, but I do not want to undertake it."

Watson strives throughout to maintain a non-partisan tenor, but his strong feelings are forever creeping here and there into the 313 printed pages. When he says, "McKinley was a real party man," you have a feeling he is paying what to his mind is a real tribute. And when he refers to the Roosevelt New Deal, it is with a feeling that "the hour is solemn."

"We stand at the crossroads," he observes. "We must make a choice: Shall we cling to the principles upon which the United States was built into the foremost Nation on earth, or shall we depart from these principles and start all over again?"

Probably Watson's two best friends in Washington were the late "czar" of the House, Uncle Joe Cannon, and that canny Pennsylvania politician, Boies Penrose. And here is the key to the political philosophy of the Hoosier. "I still regard them," he said, "as the two wisest men in the realm of politics in the real basic meaning of that term that I have ever known."

Penrose once proposed Watson for President when the Pennsylvanian's cherished hopes of another term for Teddy Roosevelt vanished with the latter's death. How Watson threw his own and Penrose's support to Harding before the convention, and how the Pennsylvania delegation's holdout for Sproul contributed to the Wood-Lowden deadlock that gave Harding the nomination is avidly related.

Watson tells of his first meeting with Huey Long, and of his part in the Long filibuster, which forced the Democrats to call an extra session after March, 1933.

"I sent for Huey Long and told him my plan," writes the Senator.

"When do I start?" asked Huey.

"At 15 minutes after 12 tomorrow," I replied.

Watson thinks Huey was a "tremendous fellow," if "wild and untamable."

His impressions of our Presidents also are interesting. Of Harding, he says: "The simple fact is that my dear old friend just did not like to work, and he ought never to have taken upon himself the enormous burdens incident to the Presidency • • •."

Of Wilson: "Woodrow Wilson was just another idealistic college professor who had beautiful dreams, and who sought to work them out in a practical world • • •."

And of Hoover: "Of course I regard lack of humor as a misfortune in any person."

"WAS COLLEGE WORTH WHILE?" by John R. Tunis. (Harcourt, Brace, $2.)

Harvard University is celebrating its tercentenary this year in an official stocktaking of its enviable position. Undeniably, Harvard enjoys a prestige that is shared with no other institution in the Western Hemisphere; a list of the distinguished men that have schooled at Harvard would fill a weighty volume, and probably does. Yet despite the myriad fair sons of Fair Harvard, and despite the renowned carte blanche of a Cambridge degree, there are those who seriously question the genuine value of the education and training offered there.

John R. Tunis, Harvard, '11, and prolific present-day sports writer, is one of the dubious group. Cognizant of the panaceatic reputation of Harvard culture, he has made a socio-psychological survey of the situation, and with alarmistic results. The "lamp of learning," he concludes in his colorful style, "tended by the ancient Greeks, blown white and high in the medieval universities and handed down to us in a direct line through Paris, Oxford and Cambridge, has at last produced a group of men whose chief ambitions, if their record tells the truth, is to vote the Republican ticket, to keep out of the breadline, and to break 100 at golf. Enviable ambitions? Yes, but does one need to go to college to have such aspirations?" This is his conclusion, not a bitter denunciation of the New England university's failure, but certainly a powerful hint, presented in an articulate and arresting fashion.

How did Mr. Tunis arrive at his Samson-like sequiturs? By simply arraigning his own class of 1911 on the statistical rack, and tabulating the divers records and opinions. Five hundred and forty-one men, doubtless overjoyed to answer an alumni questionnaire that did not solicit funds, have described their progress, material and otherwise, since leaving Cambridge 25 years ago. It was a pretty good class. Conrad Aiken was in it, and Gluyas Williams and Richard Whitney, and Arthur Sweetser. One of the class has been an American Legion head, and one is a tramp who has not slept in a bed for five years. There is one university president, and more than one member of the Harvard Club of Sing Sing. Thus Mr. Tunis is led to feel that his is a representative group, and he is probably right.

With a few notable exceptions, the class is characterized by a singular complacency and indifference toward the things of life which are not of immediate materialistic concern. By a generous reckoning, 13 per cent might be regarded as taking a live interest in governmental affairs. The majority seem to regard "voting regularly" and "damning the New Deal" as sufficient conscience-salve as far as the political situation is concerned.

The collated figures are stunningly indicative of the cultural decline of our contemporary life. Fully 50 per cent are disappointed in their life work; the majority of them believe that our civilization is a flop; the depression changed the course of every one of their lives, leaving them with the deep-set credo that there is no such thing as security. Few of them go to church, and most of them hate Roosevelt. Tunis is forced to admit that "• • • our college generation has been near as nothing to becoming a failure."

Well then, what good were the four years and $4,000 spent in and at Cambridge? Not much, is the general opinion: one-third of them feel that their courses in college were worthless; only the Phi Betes of this group are making the large salaries today, contrary to a popular belief. In fact, the basic truth of the survey is that this typical college class, supposedly the cream of youth, has turned out to be a mediocre group of citizens, and they blame their mediocrity on their age.

It is to be hoped sincerely that this timely and stimulating bit of reporting (it is nothing more than that) will not escape notice in this the jubilee year of Harvard University. Perhaps other graduates have opinions and facts which conflict with Mr. Tunis' views. Certainly, the post-depression collegian has a different attitude than his prototype of 25 years ago.

Mysteries

"THE CASE OF THE MISSING CORPSE," by Joan Sanger. (Green Circle Books, $2.)

"THE CASE OF THE STUTTERING BISHOP," by Erle Stanley Gardner. (William Morrow & Co., $2.)

"STRONG POISON" and "HAVE HIS CARCASE," by Dorothy L. Sayers. (Harcourt, Brace, $2.)

There are no comparisons which can be made between any two of these mysteries. Here are four: a good one, the first by its author; a mediocre one by the writer of eight predecessors; and the reprint of two excellent tales by a person as well-known for editing as for writing. True, two of the authors are women; and two of the books are laid in this country and the other couple in England; but the only yardstick is that each story has an amateur detective as its solvent of the criminal solid!

Joan Sanger's "Case of the Missing Corpse" features Peter Alcott as the key man. He and his fellow newspaperman, John Ellis, start a very private investigation on their own of the mysterious disappearance of Stephen Wyndham, young and wealthy sportsman. He has neither been seen nor heard of for almost a year before the story opens and while all clews have been run down by the police, nothing has been accomplished, and the whole thing is an entirely unexplained mystery.

The tale seems to move slowly at times and to contain irrelevant incidents and remarks, but credulity is not taxed and it does become clear that a strong mesh for background has been cunningly woven. Best of all, there is the unique denouement, something so seldom found that it, alone, places this book out of the ordinary. That it is unusual is attested by the fact that Ellis can not turn the story in to his paper for publication after it has been worked out.

The stuttering bishop (and who ever heard of a bishop who stutters?) opens another of Erle Gardner's accounts of cases handled by Perry Mason, a lawyer and the amateur detective in this instance. He asks Mason whether a man-slaughter charge may be prosecuted 22 years after the event, arranges a meeting between the lawyer and a third person, and disappears. But the ball he started rolling tangles Mason in its threads.

The plot is good, but winds up so precipitately that it would take a Philadelphia lawyer and a civil engineer to lay out Mason's theory on a blackboard and prove to the reader that it doesn't have numerous loopholes.

Readers of Dorothy Sayers' recent book, "Gaudy Night" will be interested in this reprint of her two earlier books which concern the joint history of Harriet Vane and Lord Peter Death Bredon Wimsey. However, because it has been six years since "Strong Poison" and "Have His Carcase" were first printed, they may easily be quite new to many people. The three books are much more enjoyably read in their chronological order, and this is strongly recommended for these two contain much important background for "Gaudy Night."

Dorothy Sayers writes with great ease and clarity and the progress of the plot is always reasonable. Strict attention is paid to keeping details, of which she is unquestionably a master, well in hand. At the end, there is a satisfaction with the manner in which all questions have been answered and all the puzzling bits put neatly into place.

In "Strong Poison," Lord Peter, who has figured in several other books by the same author, first meets Harriet Vane while she is on trial for murdering her lover. To the police, the case against her is airtight, but not so to his lordship, who succeeds in proving his contention.

"Have His Carcase" tells of Harriet Vane, while on a vacation walking tour, stumbling on the throat-slashed body of a man on a deserted beach. She is drawn into deciding whether it is suicide or murder and, if the latter, who the killer is. Peter Wimsey again takes an active part, both because of his interest in all such matters and his love for Harriet, and the sordid account is taken finally. The tale moves surely but at a moderate pace because of the careful working out of a vast mass of interlaced details.

RAE LEWIS.

Behind the Footlights

By Agnes DeLano

NOT often does an author in search of a character for a novel have the courage to penetrate behind the scenes of the theater or the opera, nor is the reason far to seek. A life that seems from the "house" side of the footlights compounded of glamour and romance, is, in reality, so exhausting, so turbulent, and so intense and exacting in its demands, that the task of giving it adequate and convincing expression taxes too heavily the ordinary writer's capabilities. To be sure, George Moore created a living figure in Evelyn Inness, and made her story a symbol for the fateful frustrations of a genius' life.

Henry James and Anatole France, in "The Tragic Muse" and "A Mummer's Tale" have both succeeded in lifting the curtain of illusions and giving their readers a real glimpse of the world that's a stage. But the reach of Moore, James, and France exceeds the grasp of the usual writer of fiction, so that when a writer turns her gifts to the serious portrayal of a great singer's life, it is an event of real moment. This, Marcia Davenport has done in her recent novel "Of Lena Geyer."

MARCIA DAVENPORT.

The story opens in St. Patrick's Cathedral, crowded with people who have come to attend the funeral of Lena Geyer. From the motley gathering of folk led thither for the most part by sentiment or curiosity are singled out Mr. Loeffler, Lena's husband; Miss de Haven, her devoted friend, Dora, her Bohemian maid, and David, the teller of the tale. This group forms the nucleus of men and women who knew Lena Geyer intimately enough to build their memories of her into a significant portrait which comes to life on the 473 pages that follow.

David, in writing Lena's life, puts upon himself the most rigid restraints, lest the truth of his portrayal be marred by a sentimental superficiality. Keenly he feels the urge to "realize" Lena as she actually was, and he augments the clarity of his own personal insight with what he can gather from the few people whose lives had touched hers deeply. The author's device for putting David into close personal touch with Lena's circle of friends keeps all of the revelations in the first person and builds the character of Lena Geyer through a series of fresh and vivid first-hand impressions. The easy transition from style to style as these different people talk and write of Lena is very skillfully accomplished.

Lena's career is traced from its obscure beginnings in Prague, where, as a child, she was dragged into the studio of Guilio Pizzetti to sing for the master, who employed Lena's mother as a charwoman. There are sordid chapters of her life as an immigrant in New York, which make one wonder at the miracle of music's power to transcend the tragic forces of misery and degradation. Later comes her relinquishment of everything except her desire to sing, and a period of study marked by the stringent economies, the weariness, and the complete dedication of her mind and soul that finally bring recognition of her gifts. Then follow years of study with Lilli Lehmann and at length the triumph in opera, first in the great European centers and then at the Metropolitan. Such an outline, however, is but the vague shadow of a story rich in the warmth of its human appeal and profound in its penetration.

THERE is in this book an authentic quality that gives the reader a real belief in the people that move in and out of the story. Such authenticity, of course, emanates from the temperament, taste, knowledge and rich cultural background of Marcia Davenport, and it bears eloquent testimony to her own capacity to live life fully and well. To be sure, she asks us to see Lena through the clear-sighted eyes of young David and through the kindly but somewhat world-weary eyes of Henry Loeffler. She wants us to know her through the meek adoration of little Miss deHaven and the frank go-getting nature of George Phillips. She lets us admire her through the exacting devotions of a teacher like Lilli Lehmann and a director like Mahler.

We glimpse quite another side of her through the possessive and self-central appraisal of the Duke de Chartres, a philandering French aristocrat. And finally we feel the measure of her genius under the magnetism of the Italian conductor, Vestri, whose superb musicianship lifted her to the intensity of her own powers which fulfilled themselves in her magnificent singing of Isolde, but which strained her humanly to the breaking point. All of these people live in worlds so separate and distinct as to be almost mutually exclusive until they are drawn together by a compelling personality like Lena Geyer.

• • • •

WHETHER the author describes the lying-in ward of Bellevue Hospital, the peaceful remoteness of a Tyrolean village, the rigors of a cross-country concert tour in pre-war America, the stress and strain of rehearsal, or the thrill of a Wagnerian opera perfectly rendered, she does it with an easy and certain authority. Incidentally, the book abounds in the descriptions of food, and so vile are the poor meals and so delectable the good ones, that one senses the touch of an Epicurean. No dyspeptic could stomach these hearty pages.

Humor is here in infinite variety. Sometimes it is blatant and bold, as when George Phillips holds the scene, and again its tenderness gives it a touch of pathos, as when Pizzetti brings to Lena in one of her greatest roles an embroidered apron as a part of her costume.

Mrs. Davenport cannot refrain from giving an occasional sly dig at the Metropolitan in its present day decline, but perhaps the soundness of her musical analysis and the strength of her musical appreciation give her the right to a little personal sally once in a while. All in all, this novel has a great deal to offer to its readers.

"OF LENA GEYER," by Marcia Davenport. (Scribner's, $2.75.)

Life by Mail Order

"CATALOGUE," by George Milburn. (Harcourt, Brace, $2.)

Devoted to the celebration of that great American institution, the mail order catalogue, the author has here elaborated upon a short story of his which appeared about two years ago. Unlike the ordinary attempt to enlarge upon a short story, this novel suffers from no attenuation of material.

Each chapter is prefaced with a text from those good books of our national hinterlands, the Sears Sawbuck and the Monkey Ward catalogues, which provide the background for some event which affects a particular member of a typical small town in Oklahoma. The result is that, like the very books about which he writes, George Milburn's book is too much an aggregation of inadequately and inaccurately characterized individuals whose variety and multiplicity seem nearly as great as those contained in any opus that Mr. Montgomery Ward ever produced.

There is a brave effort to integrate these naturally unrelated characters and events, but it is largely unsuccessful because of inclusion of unnecessary incidents and a small army of persons who impede the pace and confuse the issue. The dialogue creaks, and attempts to enliven it with bits of local color of the "Tobacco Road" variety are of little avail.

Couple Rewed, $100,000 Suit For Balm Ends

Pair United After Court Also Is Asked to Annul First Marriage.

A $100,000 breach of promise suit, filed last week, ended yesterday in the peal of wedding bells.

The marriage also quashed another suit filed at the same time—one for annulment of a previous marriage of the same couple.

The matrimonial tangle started last February 14, when Ruth Ann Campbell, a divorcee, and William W. Shives, also once married and divorced, celebrated St. Valentine's Day with nuptials at Marlboro, Md.

In the annulment suit Mrs. Campbell complained that Shives, a local contractor, was legally unable to marry her because his divorce decree had not become final at the time of the Marlboro wedding.

In her other suit she said Shives had refused to go through a second ceremony after his divorce became final. She asked $100,000 for breach of promise and deception.

The happy ending came yesterday when Shives and Mrs. Campbell appeared at the District Court for a marriage license. They were married shortly afterward by the Rev. Allen F. Poore, of 308 A street northeast.

"We are very much in love," the bridegroom explained.

Shives lives at 3121 Sixteenth street northwest, the bride gave her address as 25 U street northeast.

Maryland Club Gardens to Present Fireworks; Windsor Has Plans.

"M. Chanticleer: The other day I mentioned fireworks in talking with you about the plans this week at Maryland Club Gardens. I used the word in an abstract way, i. e., meaning 'lots doing.' Mrs. Straum, however, upon reading the column, felt a bounden duty to uphold your reputation for truth, integrity and fair play.

"Consequently, she immediately sent out an order for a huge fireworks display, and every night this week the Gardens will sear the heavens with a flaming tribute to your clairvoyance and my failure to make myself clear. Ain't that pretty good? Signed: BB."

Good? Why, that's perfect!

On the Air Today

Radio, at its advanced age of 15, proves the old wheeze that "there is nothing new" just as adequately as any of its older brothers in the show business.

For three weeks N. B. C. has been prepping a program for presentation about October 1. It is to be of the audience participation type and that means an enormous amount of preparatory planning and production perspiration.

Complete details have been worked out. Auditions have been held to locate the proper person to serve as a master of ceremonies.

And then, yesterday, word was received from New York that Phillips Lord will begin a show of almost identical format on an N. B. C. net beginning Otcober 4.

The Lord program will not interfere with the local plans. Enough small differences in the two plans actually result in two different shows. But it does go to show that identical program ideas are being developed constantly in different parts of the country and almost invariably the second producer has to take a rap of imitating the first even though it is not always the case.

More about these two programs later.

The Chicago Breakfast Club has received a Radio Guide Medal of Merit (the first daytime program ever to receive the medal). . . . Society note: Mr. and Mrs. Amos Jones, of Harlem, Chicago and Hollywood, will announce a new member of their family October 23. The young arrival already has been written into the script for that date. Mrs. Jones, you will remember, was Ruby Taylor, prior to her wedding last Christmas to Amos. It is understood that a contest will be inaugurated for the purpose of getting a name for the infant.

Loyalists Quell Bilbao Revolt, Kill 62 Leaders

Officers Tried, Executed After Attempt to Quit Leftist Garrison.

By the Associated Press.

Saint Jean de Lux, France, Sept. 15.—Spanish government firing squads tonight snuffed out attempted revolt of the Bilbao garrison.

Sixty-two officers who tried to lead their men to join rebel armies, were shot by militiamen in the courtyard of the Bilbao military prison, it was learned through diplomatic dispatches.

Almost all of their commissioned and noncommissioned officers were convicted of treason by summary court-martial and shot.

Meanwhile, Gen. Emilio Mola's rebel warships tightened their blockade on northern Spain's government-held ports tonight, hoping to starve out the defenders of Bilbao, Santander and Gijon.

The Fascist insurgents sought to gain complete control of the Bay of Biscay coast, after capturing Irun and San Sebastian on its eastern extremity.

Rebel authorities at San Sebastian received three officials of the Italian Embassy accredited to Madrid. The purpose of their visit was not disclosed.

Attack Launched.

Madrid, Sept. 15 (AP).—Government forces began a great drive tonight in the Talavera de la Reina sector, as evidence increased that the outcome of the fighting there probably would be a major factor in deciding the 2-month-old civil war.

Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the Fascist insurgents, plans to add 25,000 reinforcements to his army in the Talavera region for a renewed push on Madrid from the south, the government declared.

Officials said the Madrid regime had nearly 12,000 well-equipped soldiers in that area, about 60 miles southeast of Madrid, and expressed belief Franco's advance had been halted.

Rebels attempting to take Maqueda—a key position because it is at the intersection of roads leading to Madrid and Toledo—were beaten back to a point 7½ miles west of Santa Olalla, the government declared.

Air Battle Staged.

Rebel planes were reported to have launched a furious attack on both Santa Olalla and Maqueda, but officials here said government pursuit planes repulsed them after a series of spectacular battles. A number of houses in both towns were said to have been destroyed by bombs.

Lack of arms, a staff officer of the Madrid armies admitted tonight, and the hardships of expected winter warfare are causing deep concern to defenders of the Socialist-Communist government.

"We have all the men we want, but need more arms," Maj. Carlos Contreras said.

"It's the other way about with the Fascists—they've too many arms and not enough men."

The general staff faced with the problem of equipping the army for the anticipated winter campaign prevailed upon the ministry of war to reorganize completely the workers' legions now defending the government.

Mounting bitterness against France and Britain because of their strict adherence to neutrality was noted tonight in authoritative quarters in the face of what has been described as "daily increasing evidence" of foreign support of the insurgents.

Insurgents Lose Many.

The attack began at 9 a. m. and a violent battle raged all day. At 6 p. m. the fighting still continued.

Artillery, airplanes, armored cars and machine guns were used by both sides. As darkness fell, the government troops had the upper hand, with positions unchanged.

Embassy Sets Deadline.

Madrid, Sept. 15 (U.P.)—Eric C. Wendelin, in charge of the United States Embassy, on orders from Washington, today notified Americans living in the embassy that they must evacuate by September 22.

The embassy will be closed on that date as a place of refuge, but will remain open for official business, the notice said.

Colladay Relates Landon's Success

Edward F. Colladay, Republican national committeeman just back from Maine, last night reported Gov. Landon's train, as it rolled through New England, was cheered by thousands in New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts.

Colladay, a lawyer, spent a week stumping the Northern State for his friend, Senator Wallace H. White, and returned to Washington on the Landon train.

"At every station," he said, "whether the train was scheduled to stop or not, hundreds of natives gathered to wave and cheer Landon. In the larger towns there were thousands. There must have been 10,000 at Albany."

Maine voted against the New Deal, he said, because it disapproved of the new reciprocity tariffs which benefit Canada, because the farmers do not want Government regulation and because it resented Federal interference in business.

Driver Had a Cold, So Court Freed Him

Cincinnati, Sept. 15 (AP).—That time honored remedy for a cold—whisky mixed with rock candy and quinine—won a dismissal today for Dr. Emmett Stone of a charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

Dr. Stone pleaded innocent before Judge Samuel W. Bell and said he had taken the remedy for a cold. When an assistant city prosecutor sought to question the physician as to the value of the concoction as a cold remedy, the judge interrupted to say:

"That's a remedy that has been used for more than 50 years. I often have taken it."

Thalberg Post Won't Be Filled By His Studios

Job He Made Ends With His Death; Funeral to Be Today.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 15.—The unique place 37-year-old Irving Thalberg made for himself in the motion-picture world passed out of being with his death.

"He made his own job," an executive of M.-G.-M. Studios said tonight, "and it ends with him."

Thalberg, star maker of the screen and producer of many outstanding film successes, died yesterday at the Santa Monica Beach home he shared with his actress-wife, Norma Shearer. He had been ill only a few days. Pneumonia caused his death.

His position as M.-G.-M. vice president in charge of production will not be filled, studio executives said unofficially today. A revamping of the production fabric at the studio will be instituted, they examined, which will be tantamount to abolishing the Thalberg office.

Friends of Miss Shearer, guided to stardom by her husband who placed her in the feminine title role of his "Romeo and Juliet" production, today spiked Hollywood rumors she would retire since the death of Thalberg.

"She has no thought of leaving the screen," intimates said.

At the studio it was explained that in the last two years Thalberg had gradually withdrawn from the work of supervising the pictures made by other producers in the M.-G.-M. organization to devote all his time to the ones he made himself.

As production chief he was responsible for all M.-G.-M. pictures. This responsibility, it was stated, will be delegated to some other man, but Thalberg's position, in its entirety, will be left vacant.

Thalberg's income was estimated at approximately $1,000,000 a year. It was understood he had two contracts, one with Loew's, Inc., controlling corporaton for M.-G.-M., and the other with M.-G.-M. itself. His salary, as vice president of the production company, was said to be $5,000 a week. In addition, he was reported to be the largest single stockholder in Loew's, Inc.

The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at B'nai B'rith Temple, the studio announced. Services will be private, with a small list of invited attendants. Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin will officiate.

Culbertson on Bridge

In Appreciation.

Some of the most valuable contributions to the science of card play have come from men who neither expected nor reaped reward or recognition for their pains. Like other explorers they must find their reward in the joy of discovery.

Among the most prolific contributors is J. C. Stablein, of Seattle, Wash., who seems to possess a special genius in the field of safety plays. He apparently delights in pointing out (always accurately) that the technique used by generations of bridge players on certain type hands is faulty, always, of course, charting the proper line of play.

North, dealer.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	Pass	4 spades	Double
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

After North's initial pass South felt there was little chance for a slam and, therefore, decided to contract directly for game. West's double was, of course, of the gambling variety, but not bad. He hardly could tell that South's bid was as sound as it was, or that North would turn up with two aces. Now, I quote Mr. Stablein's terse analysis.

"After taking the ace of clubs on the opening lead it may appear that there are several methods of play that might be essayed. However a heart should be discarded on the ace of clubs and the ace and a small diamond led. If the king is with East the queen becomes established; if with West, the latter can make no return which will not permit a diamond ruff unless he leads into South's trump tenace or heart tenace."

This statement is, perhaps, not full enough for average players, so I shall elaborate on it.

On the opening lead of the king of clubs South first must decide what to discard if he takes the ace. As is pointed out above, the correct discard is the ten of hearts, not a diamond. The only card that East can have which will give him entry for the lead of a trump through the declarer to take out dummy's singleton trump is the diamond king, but if he holds that card the declarer will not need to ruff a diamond, inasmuch as his queen will become a third-round trick.

On the other hand, if West, as is more likely, holds the diamond king he will be unable to return a spade except at the cost of a trick unless he holds at least three guards to the queen. In the latter event it should be noted that dummy's eight of trumps will become an entry for the heart finesse.

Of course, if a certain lay of cards is found, namely, four spades to the queen in West's hand, as well as the king of hearts, no plan whatever will avail, but that does not alter the fact that the technique suggested is the safest possible.

About The Showshops

(With Gerald C. Gross, Batting for Nelson B. Bell)

HOWARD DIETZ, of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, rushes to us a biographical sketch of Irving G. Thalberg which contains many little known facts about the late vice president in charge of production of M-G-M. We pass them on, friendly glimpses into the career of a man whose name symbolizes the advancement of sound motion pictures in the past decade.

The middle initial "G" stood for Grant. He was born in an old-fashioned brownstone house at 1303 Bushwick avenue, Brooklyn, on Memorial Day of 1899. His parents were William and Henrietta Thalberg, father being a small-scale lace importer.

While a student in high school, young Thalberg was stricken with a heart ailment and his constitution ever afterward was destined to be delicate. He was six months a bed patient and during two years of convalescence he read scores of books, studied Spanish, shorthand, typewriting. Later he attended business college, eventually acquiring sufficient confidence in his stenographic potentialities to insert the following advertisement in the New York Journal of Commerce:

Situation Wanted: Secretary, stenographer; Spanish and English. High school education, inexperienced; $15.00.

He got the job. Within a year he was assistant manager of an exporting house—and dissatisfied. One day, while visiting his grandfather at Edgemere, Long Island, Thalberg met Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures. The latter offered him a position. Thalberg turned down the invitation.

Movies did not interest him.

Months later Thalberg changed his mind. There might be a future after all in the moving picture business. He applied for a $35-a-week secretarial job in Universal's New York offices and was accepted. But Laemmle did not hire him. In fact, Thalberg had been there several months before the company's president discovered his new employe. When he did, he insisted the youth become his private secretary.

It was only a matter of months until the cinema neophyte was being consulted on important business matters. At the end of two years, he was placed in charge of studio management when Laemmle made a trip abroad. Though still under 21, unable even to sign checks legally, Thalberg already was demonstrating the leadership which was to make him a Hollywood power.

His earliest successes were "Outside the Law," "Merry-Go-Round" and "Hunchback of Notre Dame." After "The Hunchback," with Lon Chaney in the title role, people began calling its producer the "boy Napoleon."

In April, 1924, when Metro-Goldwyn and Mayer joined resources, Thalberg, who had previously cast his lot with Louis B. Mayer, became vice president and production chief of the big Culver City plant. Still the period of silents, one smash hit after another issued from the consolidated studios under Thalberg's personal sponsorship: "Ben Hur," "The Big Parade," "The Scarlet Letter," "He Who Gets Slapped," and others.

Norma Shearer, Greta Garbo, Joan Crawford, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy, Jackie Cooper, Robert Taylor—all are big names today but they were rank unknowns when young Thalberg first paid them attention and decided they had something worth developing.

The rest is known. How he married Norma Shearer, one of his discoveries, after a bashful courtship. How they were considered one of Hollywood's ideal couples. How his first dialogue film, "The Broadway Melody," broke all records and paved the way for "Grand Hotel," "Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "The Merry Widow," "A Night at the Opera," "China Seas" and other Thalberg productions.

Only two of the eight pictures he was to have produced this year were completed when he died Monday morning. They were "The Good Earth" and "Camille." The others were "Marie Antoinette," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Pride and Prejudice," "Beloved," "Maytime" and "A Day at the Races."

Thalberg, though never in robust health, had an 18-hour working day. The antithesis of the film mogul depicted in satirical books and plays—blustering, uncouth and contemptible of all arts and crafts save his own—Thalberg was quiet, slight of build, courteous and modest in the extreme. He was the only producer on the Coast whose name is not given "top billing" on pictures individually turned out.

He was a shrewd observer, generous to a fault and never one to glory in past successes. He had a painter's fingers, long and tapering. He was ever accessible to writers, actors, directors and others concerned with the job at hand. Unlike many another husband of a famous wife, he did not mind being known as "Norma Shearer's husband."

It is no wonder the amusement world feels so deeply his loss.

"The Road to Glory," Hollywood's latest World War spectacle, makes Sherman's words, "War is hell," mild understatement. Previewed yesterday afternoon at the Fox exchange, the Capitol's screen tenant come Friday proved to be one of the noisiest motion picture features ever to fall upon these ears.

But to let it go at that would be churlish, indeed, for "The Road to Glory" is a very interesting effort boasting a worthwhile yarn, good performances by Fredric March, Warner Baxter and Lionel Barrymore, the debut of June Lang as a star (she'll be heard from again, will that young lady) and several chuckles supplied by Gregory Ratoff.

And as far as the noise is concerned, the din is not continuous throughout the picture. It's when the Allies start their big push (in 1918), which is well along in the second half of the picture, that bombs get down to business and shells begin to splatter until you think it's Fourth of July night in the Washington Monument grounds.

* * * *

Returning from the screening, we found a penciled note from Bert Granoff, so long a vocal asset at the Earle and whom we're sorry to have missed. It reads: "Stopped in to say 'hello' and good-by. Am leaving for Chicago tomorrow, where I open on the twenty-fourth as M. C. at the Bismarck Hotel. Sorry you were not in. Please send my best regards to Nelson—hope he gets 'heap much' rest. Sincerely, Bert Granoff. P. S. See you in late fall."

Miscellany: Frank Cellier dies soon after his first appearance in "Nine Days a Queen" (Earle beginning Friday) . . . that's because he plays Henry VIII who, in naming his successor to the throne, precipitates a battle in which Jane Grey (Nova Pilbeam) becomes hopelessly involved . . . Cellier has been seen here in "Rhodes," "Loves of a Dictator" and "Passing of the Third Floor Back" . . . Maestro Jimmy Lake begs to state the Gayety's next program, beginning Sunday, will feature "Hollywood's Rave, the Toast of Movieland, Miss Louise Stewart" . . . the new Maj. Bowes dance band, scouted by Capitol Manager Gene Ford in Montreal, will play Washington's No. 1 Loew house the week of September 25 . . . and the counter-attraction at the Earle the same week will be Leo Carrillo . . . "We are very happy to be able to announce his return engagement," says John J. Payette, Warner zone manager.

". . . and here's another birthday gift for you . . . It's from your mother—a night school registration card. She says she wants to learn how to read—your column . . . I promised her that as soon as she's able to distinguish the word 'Follies,' you'll take here there . . . G'night."

"Billy Fawcett's 'Whizzbang' and 'Hoosy' just were discontinued," Cedric Adams informs at Fifty-first street. "When Billy first started 'Whizzbang' he needed $10 to get out his first issue. The bank at Robinsdale, Minn., refused the loan—and so he gave a chattel mortgage on his second-hand car. That first issue sold 125,000, and in three months—he bought the Robinsdale Bank!" . . . The rich folks in France are going to Monte Carlo," Madelaine Carroll attests. "They've been assured that in a crisis Monaco will exert its sovereignty" . . . Milton Berle gets hit with a ping-pong ball during the table-tennis number at the Paradise, holds the ball aloft, and shouts: "Quick, quick—get me a plane!"

Three swains at "21" surround Bobbie Arnst, the former Mrs. Weismuller, beat their chests and wahoo in Tarzan fashion. "I've never met Avery Brundage," Eleanor Holm Jarrett insists. "The night of that famous drink party I was in bed at 9 o'clock. I drank less than the others did . . . But Art and I are booked for the next eight weeks, at $5,000 per" . . . Gabby Hartnett laughs lustily at the Tavern when Al Schacht relates how he stalled for time with an umpire while an emergency pitcher warmed up . . . Bill Robinson tries to enter the Cotton Club and is stopped by the doorman. "Tell the boss that Robinson is downstairs," he directs . . . "Which Robinson?" the guard asks . . . "Edward G.," Bill spouts.

"There's a strange celebration here," an Essex House official advises. "Baer, the St. Louis department store magnate, has had three wives. All three, who never met each other, are registered here and are giving cocktail parties for the others. Mrs. Mary Baer, wife No. 3, is a bride. But her husband didn't take her on the honeymoon trip. Instead he's taken his son, by his first wife, to Europe" . . . Fannie Brice seats herself in the Edison Green Room and is unmoved when she observes Billy Rose entering Moore's across the street . . . At Fiftieth Street Rockefeller Emile the beautician, emulates his partnamesake—by distributing shiny new pennies to wayfarers . . . "Dennis Green," a Lindy patron relates, "wrote 'Oblivion,' a London hit. In that play the hero falls and hurts himself aboard ship, the last day out. Well, Green arrived on the Britannic yesterday to work with Leslie Howard. On the last day out he fell and hurt himself."

"Look," the cashier exhibits. "Phony $1 bills. Broadway is flooded with 'em. People don't inspect 'em, so the counterfeiters are cleaning up" . . . Babe Ruth sits in a corner at Jack Dempsey's and frowns seriously while he examines a script. "Where's the usual big grin?" Jack asks him. "Grin my eye," Babe answers. "I'm studying this comedy script I'm doing with Kate Smith" . . . "My parents celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary next month," Bernie Cummins relates. "All 12 children will attend. The golden wedding ceremony will be performed by my brother—a priest."

"Hit the bar," Sherman Billingsley tells his Stork Club bartender—a signal to issue free drinks to Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., George S. Kaufman and a host of other barstandees . . . "Universal Films has signed one of the biggest directors to a two-year contract," an executive whispers, "but can't announce the deal till October 1" . . . "Just came from my lodge in Maine," Rudy Vallee relates at Fifty-third street. The undertakers are squawking over the new license plates required to be carried on all cars, including hearses. The plates carry the inscription 'Vacationland'" . . . "After you won the championship," Lou Ambers is asked, outside the French Casino, "what was your first move?" . . . "From the Somerset Hotel," he answers, "to the Waldorf."

"I'll be at the Follies opening tonight," Bert Wheeler assures at Healy's. "After dreaming of it for 15 years, I was signed by Ziegfeld to star in it with Fannie Brice. So opening night I fell, hurt my back and was replaced by Cantor . . . Incidentally, I just arrived from London, and return this week, to do a picture there with Woolsey" . . . "Poor Frank Shields," Ted Hussing laments. "Right now he's playing the best tennis of his career, and arranged to come East for the Men's Nationals. After doing nothing in Hollywood for eight months, he's ordered to stay—and pose for one day's retakes in the movie 'Come and Get It!'"

The Red Pavilion

By Pauline Stiles

Old Florentine lace covered the tray. A glass of golden orange juice mingled its glints with those of thin old silver. Golden brown coffee in a silver pot, two piping brown-gold strips of bacon, thin golden toast, golden honey in a crystal jar, a gold and crimson rose . . . Mal picked up the rose, carefully fingering its petals. What man on the brink of despair could wish for a more perfect talisman!

"This tray is exquisite, Ruben."

"Yes, suh. Miss Pam sho' do know how to doll things up."

"She fixed it?"

"Yes, suh. My old woman—Mary—can cook right smart. But Miss Pam's the one that puts on the touches."

"I—I hope I'm not bothering her."

"Not a bit, suh. Miss Pam's a great one for doing things for folks, and she's pined for it lately."

"What do you mean, Ruben?"

"Well, suh, seems like when Mr. William died most all Miss Pam's money is gone. Miss Pam cain't keep up any more and felt awful. Me and Mary would o' stayed on here and worked for nothin'. But Miss Pam say she cain't even feed us. Nobody ain't wantin' cooks and housemen any more, so me and Mary was down to our last two bits when Miss Pam come, lookin' like a rainbow in the clouds, to say she needs us back directly to help her take care o' you all . . . Seems like it was an answer to prayer . . . And young Mr. David's been actin' better since you all's been here and since he got out o' jail——"

"So he landed in jail, did he?" Mal grinned.

"Yes, suh. And scairt to death for fear Miss Pam will tell his pa. Seems like he's sorta 'shamed of hisself 'cause o' you. He's meek as can be! Yes, suh, why you's a godsend to us."

"A what?"

"A godsend."

Mal laughed.

"Well, you is now . . . I ain't seen Miss Pam so happy since Mr. William died."

"Ruben—do you think—after a while—when I can shave and get presentable that Miss Pam would mind coming up to see me for a few minutes? I'm very anxious to talk to her."

Ruben broke forth into a rumble of chuckling laughter.

"Why are you laughing?"

"Caise, Mr. Mal, they ain't never been a time when I come down with you' tray that Miss Pam don't say, 'Ruben, has he asked for me yet?'"

"Say that again, Ruben," Mal eagerly insisted, merely for the delight of enjoying a repetition.

Ruben repeated Pamella's question, enjoying in his turn the sudden blaze of light in Mr. Mal's eyes. He added that he guessed Miss Pam wouldn't mind so very much seeing him for at least a few minutes.

* * * *

Pam was finishing her breakfast with David in the sunny breakfast room. Everything about it was quite white, paneled walls, hangings, table, and dishes. Great bowls of purple-blue petunias caught the sunlight on their petals in the windows, and beyond the windows stalked the long rows of Irish yews down the garden.

Evidently David had suffered a complete reformation to be breakfasting with Pam at 9 o'clock. They both stopped a gay and animated conversation as Ruben entered, and looked up.

"You cant keep that man down when he's expectin' a lady. He's gettin' up."

"O, but he shouldn't!" Pam exclaimed with alarm.

"That's what his Jap done kep' hollerin,' but he jest went right on into the bathroom and turned on his bath . . . I ain't never seen nobody buck up so strong and so quick jest on a cup of coffee," remarked Ruben from out of his wide observation.

"He surely must be better."

"He's done cured, Miss Pam. Guess it was the talisman. He sutinly did take a fancy to it."

Pam's long dark lashes dropped and shadowed her eyes. A little quiver flickered for an instant in the corner of her mouth.

"I'll go—if you think he wants me," she said very low.

Ruben laughed a few pleased rumbles.

The door of the pantry opened and a large colored woman, whose intelligent face lighted by as rare a smile as ever graced a human being, thrust her turbaned head in.

"Ruben bring that tray on out here, and quit yo' talkin.'"

As the door closed, Pam sat immovable as if she heard something too important to be interrupted by the slightest sound. There was a radiance in her face.

"What's come over you, Pam? You look like a happy little child."

"If that's a compliment, then I thank you."

"Take it that way if you want to. You've certainly changed.

"I say, Pam. Can we touch upon the subject of Ellen, a little?"

"With pleasure."

"I got myself in bad with her the other evening. And I'd like to fix it up."

"Well, why don't you?"

"It would be a real treat to a girl like her, working and living in the sort of places she does, to see a place like this."

"Have her up, by all means, later on. I like her immensely."

"There's my good old pal! How about some Sunday for tea? Then if Mallard could join us, Ellen's day would be perfect. She's goofier than ever about him. And I'd like her to see that a real lover can be magnanimous."

"Have her up for tea, David," Pam said cordially. "But we mustn't be trying to drag Mr. Mallard into social affairs that might not interest him. He's here to rest. And I want him to feel perfectly free to do just as he pleases."

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky.

Hollywood, Sept. 14.

Robert Taylor is the biggest attraction in pictures today. His appearance in a flicker packs theaters. He plays tennis at the Beverly Hills Tennis Club, and when he does a crowd of women gathers to look at him.

ROBERT TAYLOR.

Fredric March, Clark Gable and others have played at this club without attracting these crowds.

There is always a new picture sensation. The fine thing about Taylor is that he wears success well.

He is still modest and not ritzy. He doesn't take himself too seriously. It would be false to say his quick and great success hasn't changed him. It has. To date, however, it has helped him. It has given him confidence and a firmer belief in himself, two attributes which are helping him to become a better actor.

He is asking Metro for another salary raise and rates it. He knows he must get it while they're paying off. He has been paid off in bonuses, presents, autos and clothing, and now he wants cash.

He was born in Filley, Neb., on August 5, 1911. His real name is S. Arlington Brugh. The S. is for Spangler. He was given the name of Robert Taylor by L. B. Mayer's secretary, Ida Koverman. From a list of names she decided to call him Jeffery Taylor. He objected to the Jeffery. Robert was the compromise.

He is six feet tall, weights 168 pounds, has brown hair, blue eyes and a slight scar, not noticeable, over his left eye. The first thing they made him do when he started clicking in pictures was to pluck his eyebrows.

He went to school at Beatrice, Nebr. He appeared in several school plays there and went in for oratory. Then he went to Doane College. He had no great ambition to be an actor. In fact, while at this college his great concern with dramatics was in a business way. He arranged the trips for the dramatic troupe.

After his appearance in one of these shorts, he was lent out to various studios. Metro didn't realize what they had in him. He was not made by any studio. He was made a star by the movie fans. Metro is taking great care of him now.

His ambition is to become a fine actor, and he hopes you, the fans who made him, will continue to go for him.

President to Speak at Tercentenary Celebration Friday; Foreign Officials and Delegates to Join Alumni in Parade.

President Roosevelt, ambassadors, ministers and charge d'affaires of embassies and legations are leaving today and tomorrow for Cambridge to participate in the ceremonies Friday climaxing Harvard University's tercentenary celebration.

President Roosevelt is to speak Friday afternoon at the Tercentenary Theater, constructed especially for the gatherings. In the morning alumni, delegates from foreign universities and representatives of foreign governments will parade. A luncheon, to be given by the chief marshal—Mr. Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy in the Hoover Cabinet—will be held at 1 o'clock with members of the Diplomatic Corps among the guests of honor.

Mr. Richard Southgate, chief of Protocol of the State Department and a graduate of Harvard in 1915, has been appointed marshal of the representatives of foreign governments. He will leave for Cambridge today, accompained by Mrs. Southgate who, with their children, has just returned from Osterville, Mass.

The Ambassador of the Argentine Republic and Mme. Espil will leave tomorrow for the ceremonies. They will go from Boston to New York to pass the week-end with friends on Long Island and attend the polo games in which the Argentine team will play.

Mr. Andre de Laboulaye, Ambassador of France, who holds an honorary degree from Harvard, also will go to the celebration. Mr. Hirosi Saito, Ambassador of Japan, who last week was a guest of honor at the opening of the loan exhibition of Japanese art, will go again tomorrow. Mr. Otto Wadsted, Minister of Denmark, also will be present, as will Mr. Jonkheer H. M. van Haersma de With, Minister of the Netherlands. Afterward the latter will join Mme. van Haersma de With in Holland. Both will return to the Capital in December.

Mr. Eero Jarnefelt, Minister of Finland, who with Mme. Jarnefelt, has just returned from his native land, and Mr. Dimitri Naoumoff, Minister of Bulgaria, who already is in New England, also are expected to be there.

Mr. V. A. L. Mallet, Charge d'Affaires of Great Britain; Marquis Alberto Rosse Longhi, Charge d'Affaires of Italy; Mr. Folke Wennerberg, Charge d'Affaires of Sweden; the Charge d'Affaires of Canada and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, and Mr. Tswen-ling Tsui, Second Secretary of the Chinese Embassy, will be among the guests. The Charge d'Affaires of Norway and Mme. Balbe already are in Cambridge.

Winslows to Go To Launching Of U.S. Warship

Vessel Is to Be Named for Great-Grandfather, Civil War Hero.

Capt. and Mrs. W. R. Winslow, of Georgetown, will go to Camden, N. J., tomorrow for the launching Friday of the U. S. S. Winslow, new destroyer, which is to be christened by Capt. Winslow's sister, Miss Mary B. Winslow, of Memphis, Tenn. Miss Winslow will come to Washington tomorrow and will motor with them to New Jersey for the ceremonies, returning here with them afterward for a visit at their home.

The new destroyer is named for the great-grandfather of Capt. Winslow and his sister, Admiral John Ancrum Winslow, who was a naval hero of the Civil War distinguished for the sinking of the Alabama in 1864. Their father was the late Gen. E. Eveleth Winslow, U. S. A.

The family lived in Washington for several years at various times when Gen. Winslow was stationed here. Miss Winslow was graduated from Holton Arms in 1920. Later she was graduated from Vassar. She lives with her mother in Memphis.

Amelita Alfaro Is Guest Today

Miss Amelita Alfaro, daughter of the former Minister of Panama and Mme. Alfaro, will be guest of honor today at another of the round of prenuptial parties being given for her. Mrs. James O'D. Moran will entertain for her at luncheon in the Louis Seize Room at the Shoreham. Mrs. Bernard I. Boudren was hostess there yesterday at a luncheon in her honor.

Mrs. Moran, the former Cecilia Alfaro, is a cousin of the bride-to-be and Mrs. Boudren is a cousin of Miss Alfaro's fiance, Mr. Frank Harlow Weller. The wedding is to take place a week from today.

Mme. Alfaro and Mr. Weller's mother, Mrs. Francis R. Weller, were among those present at both luncheons. Others included Miss Yolanda Alfaro, sister of the bride-to-be; Mrs. William A. Curtin, jr., Miss Laura Recinos, Miss Dorothy Dietz, and Miss Mary Virginia Boudren.

Miss Helen Bonfils Married in Denver

Miss Helen G. Bonfils, daughter of the late Frederick G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post, and Mr. George Somnes, New York stage director, were married in Denver yesterday, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

They met this summer at the Elitch Gardens Theater, in Denver, where Mr. Somnes was director of a stock company, and Miss Bonfils was a member of the company.

The ceremony, at the home of Mr. Arnold A. Gurtler, president of the Elitch Gardens company, was performed by the Rev. Henry T. Ford, assistant pastor of the Holy Ghost Church.

Miss Bonfils said the honeymoon would be a long motor trip through the East, with an extended stay in New York.

Louis Bradley, Of Capital, Wed To Miss Keller

Miss Genevieve A. Keller, of this city, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Keller, of Beresford, S. Dak., was married yesterday afternoon in the Catholic parsonage at Beresford, to Mr. Louis Francis Bradley, jr., of Washington. Msgr. Patrick T. Monoghan performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace, simply made with a close-fitting bodice, long, tight sleeves coming to points over the wrists, and the skirt forming a short train. Her only ornament was a jeweled clip, a gift of the bridegroom, which she wore at the neck of her gown. Her lace and tulle veil was caught to a cap held by clusters of orange blossoms.

Her sister, Mrs. William J. Bulow, jr., served as her matron of honor. She wore an Elizabethan gown of green velvet with a hat of the same shade. Her bouquet was a sheaf of bronze chrysanthemums. Little Miss Kay Bulow, who served as flower girl, wore a frock which was a replica of her mother's.

Mr. William J. Bulow, jr., brother-in-law of the bride, was best man, and ushers were Mr. Richard Bradley, of Washington, a brother of the bridegroom, and Mr. Donald G. Keller, of Phoenix, Ariz., a brother of the bride.

Following a wedding supper, the couple left for a trip to Chicago, through Canada and New York State. They will return to Washington and will be at home here after October 15 at 1401 Tuckerman street.

Among the guests from Washington were Mrs. L. F. Bradley, mother of the bridegroom, Mr. Richard Bradley, Mrs. Neill F. Stull and Miss Eleanor Bradley.

The bride attended the College of St. Teresa, in Winona, Minn., and the University of South Dakota. The bridegroom attended Cornell and George Washington universities and holds L. L. B. and Ph. D. degrees. He is a member of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity.

Reich Envoy Fetes Guests

Entertains Flying Boat Party at German Embassy Breakfast.

A novel function, even for Washington, where many unusual things occur, was the breakfast given yesterday morning at the German Embassy by Dr. Hans Luther, the Ambassador of Germany. He entertained a party of guests who flew over from New York to spend the day in the Capital.

The party included officers of the Zephr, German "flying boat," which arrived last Friday after a 22-hour trip to this country on a survey preparatory to the establishment of an air-mail route.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Informality marked the reception given last night by the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera at the Embassy in celebration of the Independence Day of their country.

Guests were greeted by strains of Mexican music from the drawing room on the second floor. There, with Senorita Theresa Corrado and Senor Jose Tercero, chief of the tourist division of the Pan American Union, alternating as accompanists, the guests were gathered around the piano, singing the lilting songs of Mexico. Senora de Castillo Najera, who wore a gown of flowered chiffon, joined in the singing, while the Ambassador sat among the listeners.

A feature was a brief program, including two songs, presented by the daughter of the Ambassador, Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, who wore a Mexican costume rich in color and embroidery, and a national dance, Jarabe Tapatio, by Senorita Lupita Davila and Senor Alexis Rovzar. Senorita Lulu Quintanilla, sister of the Counselor of the Embassy, Senor Don Luis Quintanilla, also sang. She wore a gown of red and white striped organdy.

Later there was dancing and, at midnight, champagne was served and the guests drank a toast to the country and joined in singing the national hymn. Although September 16 is the Mexican Independence Day, the celebration always begins at 11 o'clock the night before, as that, according to history, was the hour Miguel Hidalgo started the movement for independence in 1810.

The First Secretary of Ecuador and his bride, Senora de Mantilla-Ortega, formerly of Mexico City, were there, Senora de Mantilla-Ortega wearing a gown of black with a bertha of white lace. Also among the guests was Senora Martha de Banos, wife of the former Mexican consul in Baltimore, who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. George F. Fuhrman. Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Cajigas, the latter wearing a gown of white lace, and Dr. and Mrs. Fulton Lewis, the latter in a flowered print, black with red figures, were other guests.

Another guest was Dr. H. T. Cory, whose son, Mr. Thomas Cory, was married recently in California, and has just returned with his bride from a wedding trip to Mexico City. Some years ago Dr. Cory was chief engineer for the irrigation project in the Imperial Valley and for the building of the Southern Pacific Railway from Guaymas to Guadalajara, in Mexico.

Members of the Mexican Army Horse Show team, here for the Inter-American Horse Show, were at the function, distinguished by their uniforms. They were Capt. Barriga, Capt. Villareal, Capt. Lazo, Capt. Quiroz, Capt. De la Rosa and Lieut. Chajoya. Senor Jose Pulido Ortiz, a member of the National Commission on Irrigation, who was here for the Third World Power Conference last week, was another visitor from Mexico who was there.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

The new plans of Mr. C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks, to restore the Francis Scott Key house, in Georgetown, cheer returning citizens who have heard the good news on return from their vacations.

This historic mansion at 3516-18 M street, where the author of the "Star Spangled Banner" once lived, has often been the object of endeavors to save it for posterity.

Several women who struggled to preserve the famous house intact still are residents of Washington, notably Miss Janet Richards, the distinguished lecturer, and Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, prominent club woman and leader in educational circles. The late Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood, Mrs. George Dewey, wife of the admiral; Mrs. John A. Logan, widow of Gen. Logan, and Mrs. John B. Henderson are among those no longer living who tried to save the house.

It is certain that Mr. Finnan and his associates in the proposed plans, Mr. V. E. Chatelin, head of the branch of historic sites and buildings of the National Park Service of the Interior Department, and Mr. Malcolm Kirkpatrick, resident architect attached to the National Capital Parks, will receive many communications this winter from patriotic and civic groups glad to cooperate with them in such a worthy enterprise.

A prize story is being told of one of Washington's most important hostesses who returned from her summer home the first of the month and began to interview applicants for the post of butler in her fashionable home.

In the line of those waiting to be interviewed she noticed a rather distinguished-looking applicant who smiled at her as at an old acquaintance. When his turn came, with a flourish he drew a card case from his pocket and gave her a dinner place card with her own name written on it.

He explained that it was from a dinner given by the late Secretary of State and Mrs. Robert Lansing during the World War when he had been their butler. The presentation of the card, he explained, was to prove to his prospective employer that he had actually worked for the Lansings. He acknowledged that he had a collection of such cards, many bearing the crests of high official and diplomatic representatives.

The sequel of the story is that he got the job as butler.

A favorite rendezvous of the art colony of Washington nowadays is the picturesque studio home in Alexandria of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lahey. Mr. Lahey is the head of the Corcoran Gallery School of Art and his wife won fame as a sculptor under the name of Carlotta Gonzales.

The Laheys both possess fine singing voices and the music at the Lahey home is another thing which attracts guests there.

Nerve Injuries From Pressure.

It is well known that paralysis of a nerve may come from pressure due to posture. In other words, we can sit, or stand, or hold an arm or leg in a certain way too long. In consequence a nerve may be either stretched or pressed upon to the point of injury. Thereafter it will not transmit impulses to muscles. We say then that the part involved is paralyzed.

The case is reported of a woman aged 59 who suddenly found herself incapable of raising her right foot after she had been kneeling for quite some time. On examination the principal nerve of the leg was found to be tender and somewhat thickened, and, because of this, the muscles of the front of the leg refused to function. Several months were required for cure. A gardener, aged 42, who had been working in a crouched position for several hours, suffered the same kind of impairment and it was more than 60 days before he could resume his work.

May Bring Nerve Paralysis.

Sometimes a sleeping attitude will be followed by paralysis of the nerve governing the large muscle at the cap of the shoulder which lifts the arm (deltoid muscle). A 37-year-old man who had been accustomed to rest on his right side wakened one morning unable to use his right arm. Pressure had been so great and so prolonged as to damage the particular nerve supplying the deltoid. After several days spent in a half reclining position function was restored.

Bicycle riders occasionally suffer from a similar type of pressure. A lad aged 18 (while on a bicycle tour found at the end of a long run he could not use the fingers of either hand. He interpreted the symptom as muscle stiffness and cramp, inasmuch as within 24 hours he was able to resume his journey. The second evening, however, the phenomenon reappeared and nearly a month of inactivity was required before nerve impulses were again transmitted to the muscles.

Numerous instances of wrist drop (inability to raise the hand) due to the compression of an important nerve of the arm [the musculospiral] have been brought about by sleeping with the hands back of the head. This type of paralysis startles the patient, and though he always gets well it may take some weeks. Again, a man aged 31 suddenly developed wrist drop after sleeping with one arm hanging over the side of the bed. He could not use his hand at all for two weeks, and only partially for another month. It should be said, however, that in many persons slight symptoms of this sort may appear, only to wear off within an hour or two.

These are circumstances in which pressure or tension has been sufficiently prolonged to bring about real damage. Inasmuch as the nerve is not broken, cut, or destroyed, recovery occurs, although convalescence may be delayed.

Generally Improve Rapidly.

In most cases paralyses improve rapidly, although it has been observed that whenever a septic focus of infection exists anywhere in the body the period of recuperation may be long drawn out. Furthermore, as we can understand, should the condition recur in the same nerve a longer period of invalidism is in prospect. We must recall also that the circulation of the part may have been interfered with, thus rendering the nerve more sensitive.

Treatment consists first in avoiding the cause—releasing the nerve from the constriction, followed by heat and rest.

Most of us have had the experience of having a foot or an entire leg "go to sleep" on crossing the knees. The same symptom may be manifest in either arm. With a little rubbing and excercise "sleep" in the affected part disappears accompanied by much tingling and slight pain. Now and then it comes on regardless of the state of the weather, although it is more likely to take place when the season is cold and damp, or whenever the individual is markedly fatigued.

The moral is not to stay in any one position too long, and if the foot or arm goes to sleep rouse it promptly.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

When Expression of Condolence Has Been Too Long Postponed, How Can One 'Save Face,' Man Asks.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Back in my home town a life-long friend lost her husband this past June. I did not hear of his passing until two weeks later. My aunt was visiting in the town at the time so I felt certain that she had attended to the matter of flowers. I fully intended writing a letter of sympathetic sorrow to this dear old lady, but at that time I left home on a business trip which kept me busy for four weeks and I neglected to attend to this important matter.

* * * * *

Upon returning I did not write simply because I could not decide whether or not it was best, after so long a time, to write on the subject. Upon writing again to my aunt I now learn that she did not send flowers, because so many were being sent, which in my estimation is a lame excuse. In times of similar sorrow, this family was our most comforting friend. We have proved ourselves, however unintentionally, most unthoughtful.

* * * * *

Can you tell me, Miss Haworth, what can yet be done to right this matter? It is too late to write a letter of sympathy, is it not? Would it be all right to send a pretty bouquet to my friend, or should I now wait until her birthday? Properly speaking could I send cut flowers occasionally to her husband's grave? Appreciating your help, I am,

BILL.

Meet the Issue.

DEAR BILL: The only way out of your dilemma is to write a letter to the widow, expressing in the sincerest phrases at your command your sympathetic sorrow at her bereavement. Try to phrase it in such a way as not to open a wound which time has no doubt already partially healed. If the following explanation could be accepted by her—in the sense of sounding reasonable—you might say that you had postponed writing because you had hoped to be in your home town for a few days, some time during the summer, and had expected to call on her and express your sympathy in person. But that this proposed visit, postponed by business from week to week, now seems impossible of achievement. Hence the belated letter.

* * * *

You might say that there has not been a day when she has not been in your thoughts, and that, thinking of her, you have selected some books which you feel may be of some comfort to her. Go to a good bookstore and choose two or three books of a consoling and inspirational text, and mail them to her with the letter. You might tell her that if correspondence is not too much of a burden to her, you would like to hear from her regularly; that you would like to put her on your list of weekly correspondents, in order to know how she is getting along. What she needs most now is re-enforced ties of friendship, and little duties which will occupy the time which no doubt hangs lonely on her hands. You can make amends for your neglect of this past summer, without referring to it in so many words, by remembering her regularly in future, with a newsy, affectionate and friendly letter, even if it is only a brief note at times.

* * * *

You must decide for yourself whether or not to send fresh flowers regularly to her husband's grave. Such a gesture might make her very happy. And yet, on the other hand, it might focus her attention too constantly on her bereavement. The kindest thing one can do for the bereaved is to draw them gently along the paths of the living, away from reminders of irreparable loss. M. H.

Night School Enrollment.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Could you possibly tell me where I could write or with whom I could get in touch to obtain information regarding night school classes in one of the public schools, preferably Roosevelt. I would like to brush up on my typing and shorthand in order to obtain a job as soon as possible. Kindly give me the details of entering the school. I am a resident of nearby Maryland and understand there is a certain amount of red tape that one must go through unless a resident of the District. Sincerely, MRS. C. de M.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. C. de M.: By contacting the office of Mr. E. J. Lockwood, director of night schools for the District of Columbia, one can get full information concerning night school courses and how to enroll. Mr. Lockwood's office is in Central High School, and his telephone number is NAtional 6000. The enrollment procedure is very simple. In your case, all you need do is present yourself in person at Roosevelt High School next Monday evening (September 21) at 6 o'clock and you will be taken care of. A small fee ("very small," I am told) is required of non-resident students. Also, you will be required to furnish your own books. Classes are conducted from about 6:30 to 10:30 p. m., but it is best to be early on enrollment night. M. H.

Perfect Figure Is Demanded For New Gown Foundations

IT IS a truism in fashion that the beginning of chic is the corset. French fashion leaders particularly long have emphasized that no matter how large or small the clothes budget a goodly proportion should be expended for the proper figure foundation.

This season American women are becoming figure-conscious. One reason for this is the popularity of the princess silhouette. New clothes this fall not only call for new figures but they call for shapes that are flawless.

You cannot wear 1936 garments with your old corsets or foundations. And no matter how slender your figure, no matter though your measurements conform with those of Venus de Milo or Miss America, you will need the right kind of a corset to set off your clothes. With trim smug waists and fitted revealing garments it will be next to impossible to look chic without what manufacturers call the "corseted silhouette."

Several types of period silhouettes are fashionable. All stress the stately sweeping lines and full, high busts. Straight lines are out; curves are in. However, the curves must be restrained. Hips and waists must be slender and diaphragms flat, no matter how flaring or bouffant skirts may be.

While the "corsete silhouette" with the princess lines and high molded bosom is particularly featured in evening clothes, yet it also prevails in daytime fashions. Even the tailored and sports costumes are revealing of feminine figures.

The long torso effect and high bust lends itself particularly to the season's fabrics—to the sheer clinging woolens, the broadcloths, velvets and metals. Seldom before has "line" been so important in clothes.

The princess silhouette is particularly adapted to the American woman whose body lines naturally tend to be long and lithe. It shows off to advantage her height and her sweeping movements. It suggests an uplift of body, a reaching toward the stars. It requires a regal posture, a bouyant poise. With it heads cannot be thrust forward or held down, shoulders cannot be slumped or diaphragms protruded.

The new corsets and foundations, like the new dresses and hats, are elaborate and feminine. Satin and lace abound on them, though there are simpler models for those who prefer them. Satin applique is a favorite form of trimming.

Brassieres are definitely of the uplift style and give sturdy support to the raised busts. They, too, are elaborately trimmed.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

FOR the first time in the history of the Women's National Tennis Championship tourneys, we had a look at a feminine net star from the Orient. The first Far Easterner to compete for the title out at our Forest Hills saucer is Mrs. Tokuko Morikawake Nakana, the Japanese champ.

ALICE HUGHES.

Barely 5 feet tall is black-eyed little Mrs. Nakana, with a net-side weight of 115. For all her small stature, she has a mean sting in her forehand. As I talked to her the first day of the tournament, I kept thinking what an interesting mixed-doubles team could be concocted by tying her up with little "Bitsy" Grant, Atlanta's pride!

The little Oriental never had a lesson from a pro in her life, but 14 years of competitive tennis have taught her plenty. She won her first Japanese championship in 1925. Oddly enough, though both her parents were Japanese, she was and is an American citizen, having been born under Old Glory in Hawaii!

The tiny star's husband, Fugio Nakana, has been transferred to the New York office of the Yokohama Specie Bank from his former post in Tokyo, and will be here for four years—so the Missus will be seen on local courts for some time to come. "I like America," she told me the other day. "Americans are friendly, frank and open; the food is wonderful—and you have so many fine tennis players!" Didn't take her long to find that out! Was she whipped!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Local luncheon tables and cocktail lounges are still buzzing over the recent hitching of Winthrop (Winnie) Gardiner, one of the eligibles of the village, to the not-so-social Mildred Shay Murphy out in Yuma. Winnie owns the historic Gardiner's Island off the tip of Long Island . . .

Speaking of romance, there's no place to nurture it like the backstage regions during the long run of a hit play. That's real propinquity! Drina Hall and Theodore Newton, principals in the very successful "Dead End," have just announced their engagement. Both have toity backgrounds — she's Miss Porter's School and the American Academy of Dramatic Art; he's Lawrenceville and Princeton, no less . . .

* * * *

Marion Stephenson, my roving fashion-photographer pal, is back from her annual European junket with a half dozen cameras, and reports that the nudity along the Riviera the past summer was something terrific to behold. She brought home hundreds of exposed plates to prove the scandalous torso-revelations . . .

Helene Lyolene, the Paris dressmaker, is just off the boat for a spot of business on our side of the Atlantic. Dresses she made for me in '34 and '35 boosted my sartorial standing to new highs (for me), and after seeing the little number for '36 I have a feeling I am going to do all right this fall. Such get-ups are great morale-boosters . . . Another high-class clothes architect who has just turned up is the famous Creed of London. He brought with him one of the swellest collections I've ever witnessed, too . . .

* * * *

Remember Helen Kane, the plump minx who grew famous over night with her boop-a-dooping, and fell from sight almost as quickly? I saw her the other afternoon, plumper than ever, and she tells me hopefully that she's trying for a comeback. Little stage girls won't give up—not even boop-a-doopers!

Clothes notes from hither and thither:

Local furriers are trotting about looking expansive and pleased. They had the biggest August in years, and cold, hard figures prove that in this district fur sales were practically 60 per cent higher than during the same month a year ago. And oddly enough, the more expensive pelts led the parade.

* * * *

Modern glamour girls would rather be pretty and alluring than chic, my researches prove. They won't roll their hair up in Chinese screw-curls, but wear it in soft, face-framing ringlets. And, realizing that the men folks prefer sheer black hosiery to any other sort, they wear it, whatever style sharks say.

* * * *

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth Mac Rae Boykin.

"I KNOW that tables lamps are much more fashionable these days than floor lamps, but just the same, I like at least one floor lamp in a room, so if you don't feel that it would be entirely out of place I'd like to get a good one for my living room. Will you suggest what kind would be best, providing the idea isn't out completely?"

The lady who asked us this question lives in a English type of house, and we've always enjoyed the way she's furnished it—all the rooms on the first floor are in the same color scheme . . . light green walls, light green carpets, draperies of an all-over English chintz design on a white ground. Most of the furniture is in this same chintz, made into slip covers, except the sofa and the dining room chair seats which are dark red.

This was the setting then that the floor lamp she asked about would go in. And our answer to her was—yes, by all means get a floor lamp. They're not out of fashion at all, though they're not used as much as table lamps, that's true. But they're certainly useful to have and the stores are showing very nice designs just now. The ones that take our eye are those with the indirect lighting arrangement inside. They have a shade just like any other lamp and globes to use in the same way, but in addition, there is a reflector, too, that can be switched on to throw indirect light upward. That makes them good for general room illumination, as well as for specific purposes.

Get a nice shade . . . floor lamps often don't look smart simply because the shade is frumpy looking or a bit dated.

Grandchild's Place Is Held In Own Home

Has No Right to Intrude Upon Unmarried Aunts or Uncles.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

WHEN MARY was 11 her older sister married; and before Mary was well in her 'teens she was in the proud position of aunt to two youngsters. At first it was very pleasant to have a nephew and then a niece to brag about. One felt very old and sophisticated to be able to say, "My niece is starting to walk," or "My nephew has a new tooth," or "My niece and nephew look almost like twins."

But when niece and nephew began to spend long periods of time with their grandparents, and to take the center of the stage, Mary saw the situation in a very different light.

At a time when she should have been enjoying the benefits of being the daughter of the house, and should have had parties and all the other gaieties of a growing girl, she found herself pushed into the background by two small children who were not rightly part of the household. Any girl might justifiably have resented such an intrusion, and Mary was no exception.

The tendency which grandparents have to assume the burden of the next generation does actual harm. There is no reason why young people should feel at liberty to park their babies on their parents' doorsteps every time they themselves want a holiday or feel like taking a trip away from home.

Even if the grandparents are glad enough to take on the responsibility, there is often the question of the unmarried children still at home to be considered. Why should they have to put up with babies who are, after all, a generation away and none of their affair?

There are few homes so big that the addition of small children to the household, however well behaved they may be, does not interfere with the ordinary routine of life, and prevent entertaining and freedom of action.

Be a Good Dancer

See how they swing through that fox-trot. Hands at correct shoulder height, Jack's right hand below Elaine's left shoulder-blade. Each looks over the other's right shoulder.

Confidently Jack leads through clever combinations of steps. He isn't afraid of treading on Elaine's toes, as he used to be. She is easy to lead, for she lets her partner step first.

Notice how some of those other girls on the floor sag on their partner's arm. How they hippity-hop with too much knee-bend instead of gliding smoothly. Or dance stiff-kneed in a misguided effort to achieve a flowing, graceful motion. Or let hands droop. Or tilt the head back and gaze straight at their partner in that beak-to-beak, bantam rooster effect.

They should take a tip from Jack and Elaine who learned to dance at home. The phonograph worked hard while they stepped off the tango, the fox-trot, the waltz, the rhumba. They learned all the basic steps. How to walk backward gracefully, not like a polar bear on ice. They worked with diagrams, that's why it was so easy.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Social Dancing Self-Taught," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Post Recipe Contest Proves Apples Help Many Dishes

Prize-Winning Entries Show Wide Variety of Uses to Which This Fruit May Be Applied in Preparing Meals.

WASHINGTON HOUSEWIVES depend upon apples to enhance breakfast, luncheon and dinner menus, according to the variety of recipes entered in their favor in The Post's contest last week for apple dishes. Every conceivable apple dish from chutney to dumplings was present. The prize winning dishes printed below will you give some idea of the important role apples play in adding variety to menus.

Apple Fritters.

Peel, core and slice 3 large apples thin. Put in bowl and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Wet with one-half glass of brandy or rum and let stand about 15 minutes. Drain and dip slices into batter, allowing excess batter to drain off, and fry in deep fat hot enough to brown a piece of bread in one minute (350 degrees Fahrenheit). Drain on brown paper and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Fritter Batter.

¾ cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
½ cup water or milk
1 teaspoon melted butter
½ teaspoon lemon juice.

Sift flour and salt, add beaten egg yolks, ¼ cup of water and lemon juice. Mix with a wooden spoon, add the remainder of the water gradually, then butter. Mix until smooth. Add the whites of eggs, beaten stiff, just before batter is to be used.

Apple and Cucumber Salad.

1 head lettuce
4 long cucumbers
2 red apples
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons vinegar
4 tablespoons salad oil
½ cup Roquefort cheese
Ripe olives and cress

Pare cucumbers, lay on lettuce leaves, slice down crosswise not quite through to bottom in thin slices. Quarter and core apples, but do not peel. Slice thin and place between cucumbers, alternately—red skin up. Garnish with ripe olives and crisp water cress and serve with Roquefort dressing prepared by mixing thoroughly the salt, pepper, vinegar, salad oil and crumbled Roquefort cheese.

The first of the three $1 prizes is awarded Mrs. G. H. Montgomery, 1223 Twelfth street northwest. Her recipe follows:

Apple Chutney.

3 quarts sliced apples
3 lemons sliced and seeded
2 chili peppers without seeds
1 quart brown sugar
1 quart cider vinegar
1 quart dates stoned and chopped
1 pint tarragon vinegar
2 pounds large raisins
1 tablespoon ground ginger
1 tablespoon paprika
1 tablespoon salt
1 onion chopped
2 cloves garlic

Chop the apples and lemons separately, but combine as quickly as possible as the lemon juice keeps the apples from turning dark. Mix all ingredients. Boil gently until the apples are soft, stirring mixture occasionally with a fork. Pack while hot in sterilized jars, seal and store in cool place.

Second of the three $1 prizes goes to Miss Leona Turner, 1401 Alabama avenue southeast, Anacostia, D. C. Her recipe follows:

Apple Scallop.

3 large apples
¾ cup brown sugar
Juice of 1 lemon
1/3 cup butter, melted
1½ cups crushed ginger snaps
1½ teaspoon cinnamon

Peel, core, quarter and slice the apples in thin sections and sprinkle with lemon juice. Blend together the sugar, cinnamon, melted butter and gingersnap crumbs. Fill a baking dish with alternate layers of sliced apples and the crumb mixture. Cover and bake for 1½ hours at 350 degrees F. (a moderate oven). Serve with whipped cream. Serves six.

Last of the three $1 prizes is awarded Mrs. M. L. Wathen, Faulkner, Md. Her recipe follows:

Casserole of Pork Chops With Apples.

2 cups bread crumbs
Salt—poultry seasoning
6 pork chops trimmed of excess fat
1 tablespoon onion juice
Quartered tart apples
Brown sugar—cloves

Mix bread crumbs, salt and poultry seasoning and line shallow well-greased casserole. Lay in pork chops, sprinkle with onion juice, and cover with apples, sugar and spice. Add 1 cup hot water. Cover with lid and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 45 minutes to 1 hour.

Spices Provide Pickle Flavor

Ingredients Come From 7 Nations; Chowchow Recipe Given.

DO YOU know that it takes three continents and six or more countries to put a single jar of pickles in your preserve closet? We women may brag that our condiments are all home-made, perhaps even home-grown, but every jar should really be labeled "Made in Asia, Europe, America and the Islands of the Sea."

Neither fruit nor vegetable pickles would please our palates as they do if it were not for the spices that give them distinctive flavor and aroma, and practically all the spices we use come from distant lands. Asia produces the greatest variety and Eudope contributes most of the so-called seed spices and herbs.

The countries are called upon to make up even the smallest package of pickling spices include India, China, Japan, Ceylon, England, Spain and Austria. In the more comprehensive assortments still more of these distant countries are represented.

Chowchow.

2 quarts small green tomatoes
12 small cucumbers
3 red peppers
1 cauliflower
2 bunches celery
1 pint small onions
2 quarts string beans
¼ pound mustard seed
2 ounces turmeric
½ ounce allspice
½ ounce pepper
½ ounce clove
1 gallon vinegar
Salt

Clean and prepare the vegetables by cutting into small pieces, then cover with salt and let stand 24 hours. On the following day heat the vinegar and spices to the boiling point, add the vegetables after they have been well drained and cook until soft. Fill glass jars and seal.

Incidentally, your empty mustard jars, mayonnaise and other wide-preserves. Most of them are at-quantities of chowchow and other right thing for puting up small gift mouthed glass bottles are just the tractively shaped, and their re-use for gift purposes has infinite possibilities of decoration with cellophane or waxed paper.

British Tea Idea.

Tea for the British on the Queen Mary is a matter of thin bread and butter, scones and tiny cress sandwiches. As a concession to the Americans on board, small cakes are served.

Meal-in-Dish Recipe Contest Topic of Week

CASSEROLE dishes have become so popular in the scheme of menu planning being as heartily endorsed by the smart hostess for buffet and after theater parties as for dinner on the maid's day off that they have been selected as the theme of The Post's recipe contest for this week.

Every Post food page reader is invited this week to send her favorite casserole or meal-in-one dish recipe to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Cash awards will be offered for the five best recipes. The first prize is $5, the second $3, and the three remaining prizes $1 each.

Only recipes that are typed or neatly written in ink will be considered for a prize. Due to the vast number of entries it is suggested that each contestant submit but one recipe.

Plate Dinner Proves Ideal For Apartment

Numerous Combinations Can Be Served in This Way.

By Dorothea Duncan.

MANY women who have a small apartment and no extra help for cooking and other household duties find that they can conserve time and energy if they plan to serve dinner meals with the exception of appetizer and dessert from individual plates. These plates are served in the kitchen, which eliminates the serving dishes from the table, making the table itself, though it is small, seem quite spacious.

D. DUNCAN.

Plate combinations are not at all uncommon during the summer when cold cuts of meat and salads are so much in evidence. In the fall they are frequently forgotten unless the regular grill, which consists of broiled chops or steak, vegetables and fruits, is served. This type of meal is prepared all at once under the broiler flame, and many women feel that it is the only type of meal that can be called a plate dinner.

Any combination of foods, however, that can be attractively arranged on individual plates should be considered for the plate dinner. All of the foods need not be broiler cooked as you will see when you read the suggested plate dinners farther along in the column. But the cooking of many of the foods may be completed under the broiler if the flame has been lighted for one of the dishes included in the combination you plan to serve.

Boiled vegetables, for example, topped with melted butter will brown nicely under the broiler and can be slid in while chops, meat patties, steak or broiling ham cook. Boiled potatoes topped with grated cheese or cooked sliced sweet potatoes dotted with butter and brown sugar should have their final cooking under a broiler flame.

Vegetables Abundant

Many women who consider the plate dinner ask about the salad course. You will notice that many of the suggested plate combinations below include an abundant supply of vegetables. Of course, a well balanced diet must include some uncooked foods, some roughage such as lettuce, chopped cabbage, or other greens. You can depend upon a large salad at luncheon to supply most of the roughage your diet demands. The rest of your salad foods may be brought into the dinner menu in one of three ways. Celery, raw carrot sticks or other crisp raw foods that can be served from a relish dish may accompany the plate dinner, or a combination salad dessert may be served to complete the plate dinner or the first course may be a salad, appetizer.

Even though the plates from which you serve your dinner are divided it is usually not advisable to include a crisp salad on the same plate, for the plates should be warm when the hot foods are placed upon them. Hot slaw, wilted lettuce, or similar dishes may be served from the warm plates when they complement the special combination of foods.

1—Chilled pineapple juice, grilled loin lamb chops wrapped with bacon, mushroom caps, tomato halves, baked potatoes—jellied cherry and almond salad with whipped cream dressing and cheese wafers.

2—Hot tomato juice with lemon wedges—hamburger and onion patties, potatoes with grated cheese, browned carrots, celery curls—lemon meringue tarts.

Other Suggestions.

4—Chilled prune juice with lemon—grilled sausage cakes, apple rings, escalloped potatoes, buttered cabbage with grated raw carrot garnish or browned parsnips—canned peach halves with chilled custard.

5—Chilled grapefruit juice—broiled ham, pineapple rings, browned sweet potatoes, buttered broccoli, raw carrot sticks—butterscotch tapioca with meringue topping.

6—Chicken broth—poached egg nested in baked stuffed potato, buttered golden bantam corn in tomato baskets, creamed green beans—avocado, orange and grapefruit salad with lime French dressing.

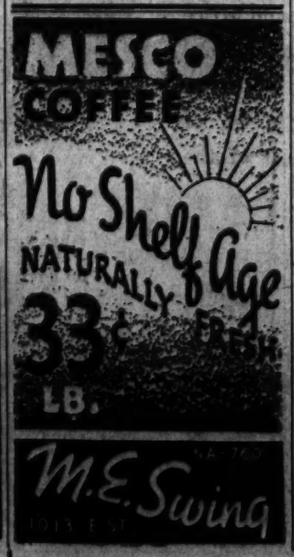
8—Shrimp cocktail—baked tomatoes or green peppers stuffed with Spanish rice, buttered asparagus tips, cauliflower with cheese sauce, wilted lettuce—deep dish apple pie.



Creamed Dried Beef Offers Quick Meal

Creamed dried beef is a good short-order dish. It is often served when unexpected guests drop in and stay for luncheon. It is popular with the housewife because it is easily prepared from ingredients that can be kept in the reserve stock on the pantry shelf.

Keep evaporated milk and dried beef in glass jars on the emergency shelf and you will never be lacking for a delicious hot dish that can be prepared in haste.

Prepare creamed dried beef this way from the ingredients mentioned above. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a frying pan. Pull one-quarter pound dried beef apart, removing any stringy portions, and frizzle in the hot butter until the edges curl. Sprinkle 4 tablespoons flour over the beef. Stir with a fork to blend well. And 1 cup boiling water. Boil until sauce begins to thicken, then add 1 cup evaporated milk and finish cooking. Serve at once on thin hot toast or in mashed potato nests. One cup of cooked green peas makes a pleasant addition to the creamed chipped beef.

Paris Emphasizes Fur For Fall and Winter Togs

Go Well With Salad.

Cheese foldovers are delicious to serve with Waldorf salad, baked apples or scalloped apples. To make the foldovers, roll plain biscuit dough into a long strip about 3 inches wide. In the center of the strip arrange slices of cheese an inch wide and about one-fourth inch thick. Fold the dough over the cheese, slice the resulting roll into inch lengths and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit) about 12 minutes. Serve hot.

granted five New Deal lodges—Farm Credit Administration, Securities and Exchange Commission, Railroad Retirement Board, Public Assistance Division and Social Security Board—on undocumented charges of "communism."

Revocation of temporary certificates of 28 Florida lodges reported to have been organized to pack the State Federation of Labor in Florida.

A vote of confidence in the executive council's policy of granting temporary certificates to new lodges and retaining the discretion to vote permanent charters "only to those groups motivated by the highest sense of good sense and loyalty."

Seating of the conservative-supported delegation from the General Accounting Office, consisting of Jacob Milwet, Leon Maxson and Byrd Glass.

Refusal to recognize the proxy vote of George Rycraw, anti-conservative, for the colored Navy Yard Lodge No. 184.

Babcock Defends Record.

In a speech interrupted frequently by cheers and applause, Babcock defended his right to live "my own personal life," and attacked the executive council for disregarding the constitution. He advised the council's members to read the A. F. G. E. constitution "tonight before going to bed," and told them "you must obey the laws of the constitution, and render justice."

The convention, which only that morning had expelled five left-wing lodges on a vote of confidence in the council, cheered Babcock's words.

He charged the executive council with forcing his resignation by threatening to attack his "character and reputation from coast to coast," and defied "any person now to state publicly in this convention anything he wants to say about me in my presence."

Yaden Takes Charge.

Alarmed by the pro-Babcock demonstrations at last night's session, conservative leaders decided to adopt more aggressive tactics and called upon Yaden to serve as informal floor leader.

Yaden's parliamentary skill was considerably in evidence at the morning session, and the convention machine moved smoothly, never getting out of hand, as it had the night before.

On the first test—that of seating the conservative-supported delegation from the General Accounting Office—James C. Reeves, of the Engraving and Printing Lodge, asked that the vote be "a question of confidence in the executive council."

Custer Reads Ouster Report.

Expulsion of the five left-wing lodges also was made a vote of confidence in the council. Its report recommending the expulsion was read by Cecil E. Custer, national treasurer, and one of the four Washington members under recall. He has led the anti-"red" campaign against the New Deal lodges.

The Social Security Board Lodge, he said, has accused officials of the Civil Service Commission with playing partisan politics, and is dominated by an "embarrassing" leadership.

The Securities Exchange Commission Lodge has as one of its most prominent members "an individual known to have been a member of the Communist Party of America;" the Railroad Retirement Board Lodge is "dominated by improper leadership," and the Farm Credit and Public Assistance Division units are declining in membership, he charged.

The council report recommended that the Public Assistance Division be merged into the District Department Lodge.

The only "documentary" evidence offered to support the charges was a copy of the Daily Worker of July 17, in which Custer declared a story was carried stating that eight members of the Fingerprint Bureau of the Department of Justice had been dismissed for union activities. On that date, Custer said, the eighth member had not been dismissed.

"I ask you," Custer exclaimed, "how the Daily Worker could have known in advance that eight employes were going to be dismissed unless Justice Lodge was in league with the Communist Party?"

He accused the other lodges of showing "red" tendencies by fraternizing with the Justice Lodge.

In subsequent debate, the only additional evidence was a statement by John A. Dwyer, president of AAA Lodge, No. 116, that the Agricultural Adjustment Administrator

Asked by reporters when the dissations against a number of employes and that 40 had been dismissed.

Asked by reporter when the dismissals took place, Dwyer replied that he was referring to the dismissal of Gardner Jackson and other "left wing" New Dealers. In dismissing Jackson, the AAA never, to public knowledge, accused him of being a "Communist."

Fist Fight Averted.

Delegates from New York and District "New Deal" lodges, who demanded "more time to consider the expulsion of so many members," were blocked by parliamentary objections.

The debate nearly wound up in a fist fight between Henry Rhine, of the Works Progress Administration, and G. Carroll Dimond, of the Adjutant General's office, another of the Washington Council members under recall.

Pleading particularly for the retention of the Railroad Retirement Lodge, whose membership was made up "of men who have been in the labor movement for more than 30 years," Rhine finally was howled down by conservatives.

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Baroness Eva von Blixen-Finecke and her pilot, Kurt Bjorkvall, successfully completed a test flight today at Floyd Bennett Field in preparation for a projected non-stop flight to Stockholm, Sweden.

An earlier attempt was frustrated and only quick work of hangar attendants prevented serious damage when fire, caused by a faulty carburetor, threatened the plane at Roosevelt Field.

D. A. R. Honors Memory Of 'Heroine' of 1776

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Seven members of the D. A. R. gathered today to pay their respects to the memory of a woman who helped win the Revolutionary War with wine and blandishments.

They laid a wreath on a tablet that said Mrs. Mary Murray had "rendered signal service" in the war. The tablet, standing at Park avenue and Thirty-fifth street, didn't say what the service was, but historians assert that Mrs. Murray got Gen. Howe and his aids drunk.

With a few fair friends, she plied the British officers with drinks and compliments until Aaron Burr had led his followers north of Thirty-ninth street and to safety.

* X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1936 19

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Samuel Lubell.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 15.—All the talk in the lobbies this morning was of Babcock, of the amazing demonstration on his behalf at last night's session of the A. F. G. E. convention.

Here was a man who was forced to resign because of a "spoils" attack on the Administration under bitter fire, who for three months has been the object of a whispering campaign and who only a few weeks ago announced that he did not consider himself "a good risk" for the presidency because of poor health.

Yet by taking the floor twice, once to demand an opportunity to defend himself against the charges of the executive council which ousted him and again to proclaim to the convention that he still was "actually president" he virtually took over the convention.

The demonstration was a tribute, not only to his personal popularity among the delegates but to his skill as a convention manager and a politician. Conservative leaders had made the boner of letting it be known that they would introduce a rule to make the Babcock resignation the first order of business and to elect a president immediately after. "Babs," the field liberals and District "radicals" were not caught napping, and had their blocs of votes lined up solidly against the rule.

While "Babs" moved about on the floor prompting the delegates to make motions, raise points of order and questions, conservative leaders sat on their hands and took it on the chin. They seemed to be relying on temporary chairman, George Googe, to crack down, but Googe, without any help from the floor, was powerless to do so even had he wished.

The A. F. of L. is plenty worried about the sudden Babcock boom. It doesn't want him as president, but is afraid of antagonizing him too openly for fear he will join Lewis' C. I. O., taking with him several thousand members.

The conservative machine was working more smoothly when the convention reconvened today. James G. Yaden, parliamentarian number one of the district department, was on hand to raise previous questions, points of order and to make shrewdly-worded motions.

Then most of the doubtful delegates had been warned to get in line. The feelings of some were eased. One specific case was the seating of Robert Alcorn, of Navy Yard Lodge, No. 93. Alcorn's seat had been held up on a technicality and the grand old man of retirement was plenty peeved, as were many of his friends. The situation was straightened out by the credentials committee, however, at the wee hour of 1:30 in the morning.

When Babcock sat down in the convention yesterday morning the seats on both sides of him were vacant. This morning they were filled.

One of the reasons why Babcock took so well last night was that Representative Robert Ramspeck's speech left a bitter feeling among many of the delegates. Ramspeck's speech was too obviously a campaign talk, they contended, to be delivered to a non-partisan organization.

Black seems the most predominant color among the women delegates, but Helen McCarley, of Navy Lodge, assured us there is no cause for grief—simply that it seems to be the color for the season.

Roll Calls

George Googe got a laugh out of the convention by appointing John R. W. Smith, New York liberal being supported by the so-called "New Deal" lodges in the district, and James G. Yaden, arch-foe of the "progressives," tellers for the roll call vote. Yaden at first declined but was virtually pulled to his feet by Smith who shook his hand and laughingly referred to "friendly enemies."

At the crucial roll call on the expulsion of the temporary certificate lodges at this morning's session, Henry Rhyne, of WPA lodge; John Sharkey, of Labor No. 228, and Vice President James B. Burns, of San Francisco, were tellers.

The vote of the District lodge on the expulsions question was as follows. In favor of dropping the temporary certificate lodges:

Navy, Adjutant General's Office, National Bureau of Standards, through proxy; General Accounting Office, Public Buildings and Public Parks, War Finance, Library of Congress, Weather Bureau, Treasury, Postoffice Department, Engraving and Printing, Civil Service Commission, Tariff, Compensation, Public Health Service, Internal Revenue, District of Columbia Navy Yard, No. 93; Mount Alto Veterans Hospital, District Jail, through proxy; AAA Internal Revenue field agents, National Capital Parks, General Land Office, National Training School for Boys, National Zoo, through proxy; Government Printing Office, Labor No. 12, Translators, through proxy; Inter-Department Agriculture, Interior, State, Works Progress Administration and Resettlement.

Not voting: Interstate Commerce Commission, Superintendent of Documents. Repercussions of that vote will be heard when the district department meets after convention.

Institution Lacks Funds To Aid 'Unfit'

New Patients Admitted Only When Others Die or Are Discharged.

The first in a series of articles which will attempt to explain the little-known problems of the District Training School at Laurel, Md., where Washington's mentally deficient are cared for.

By Ed Fenton.

Is the District Training School—Washington's answer to the mental deficiency problem—in danger of becoming merely an "idiot colony?"

Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the school, says it is, unless Congress appropriates adequate sums for maintenance, additional personnel and necessary new buildings.

The institution, originally known as the District Training School for the Feeble Minded, was founded 12 years ago near Laurel, Md. Its purpose, as its name indicated, was in line with the modern idea of teaching the mentally deficient to become socially adequate, to be able to carry their weight in the complex community life of the present time.

Slowly Smothered.

Today, after more than a decade of operation, that ideal is being slowly smothered by a Congress that does not understand the need for a modern institution to teach and take care of the children whose minds may never grow up.

Congress, through false economies, is turning the clock back 100 years, to the days when the mentally deficient were put into "idiot colonies," to be left there until they died.

To understand why this is the case it is first necessary to know something of the mental-deficiency problem in the District.

According to Dr. Lewald, there are 10,000 mentally deficient persons in Washington. Of these, 1,000 are in urgent need of institutionalization.

Others Are Safe.

The other 9,000, he says, do not need to be placed in an institution. Many of them are already adjusted to society. Others come from families able to take care of them.

But, for reasons to be explained in an ensuing article, these 1,000 cannot be left to live in the community without training. Some of them must be permanently segregated from the community. Some, after training, can return under supervision to community life.

There are 540 patients now crowding the capacity of the District Training School. There are 234 persons on the waiting list. Some of them have been waiting for years. There are others who should be on the list but who are not put there because of the hopelessness of the situation.

Others Must Be Confined.

Only a certain percentage of those committed to the institution can be returned to the community. The others, and they are the majority, must be kept there, segregated from society.

At present time the District Training School has no room for additional inmates. New patients can be admitted only when the old ones die or are released under supervision.

Under such conditions it is patent that the few who are chosen for admission must be the most definitely urgent cases from a list of persons in pathetic need of institutional attention.

The result is a vicious circle that is filling the training school with those who, under no circumstances, could be released.

Others Not Urgent.

The individuals who could be taught to adjust themselves to community life—who could be released to make room for others—stand small chance of admission. They are not "urgent."

And so the institution is becoming loaded with "custodials," those who cannot care for even their simplest wants and who can never be released.

As the available places become taken with "custodials," the less urgent cases have a slimmer and slimmer chance to gain admittance. The eventual result is obvious. Unless additional facilities are granted the school in a few years will care for none but custodials and time and knowledge will be spun backward a century.

"About 60 per cent of the patients here can never be released," Dr. Lewald says. "I estimate that at the present rate that number will in four or five years approximate 100 per cent. Only additional buildings and personnel can prevent such a situation."

Board to Name District School Officials Today

Central High Principal to Be Chosen; Vocational Status on Program.

The Board of Education, meeting today at 3:30 p. m., will face a long list of business items to be disposed of in preparation for the opening of schools next Monday morning.

There are several appointments to be made, notably that of the principalship of Central High School. Assistant principals also will be added to the staffs at Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Cardozo High schools and several minor positions remain to be filled.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, has spent much of his time during the last week interviewing applicants for these positions. His recommendations will be presented to the personnel committee of the board at a preliminary meeting at 2:30 p. m.

Steps to settle the controversial status of eachers in the vocational schools, which this year is raised from the elementary to the junior high level, probably will be taken. Dr. Ballou told board members last week he was preparing a list of those vocational school teachers who were entitled to promotion to the junior high levels, and the accompanying higher pay.

One Salary Bracket.

The Teachers' Union, with the support of the Central Labor Union, has advocated blanketing all vocational teachers into the junior high school salary bracket. Ballou, however, has contended that only those teachers who can meet junior high school teachers' qualifications are entitled to the pay increase.

This afternoon, the superintendent is expected to announce a list of teachers which he, after an investigation, has found eligible to the higher standing. Such teachers, Ballou said last week, will receive increased compensation as of September 1.

A decision on the "supervised study" experiment began last spring at Anacostia Junior and Senior High School as a plan to reduce the amount of necessary home study, may be reached this afternoon. Dr. Chester W. Holmes, now assistant superintendent of schools, who as principal of the school fathered the experiment, has asked that the plan be continued for another year to permit further study as to its worth.

If the plan is continued school will begin at 8:30 a. m. instead of 9 a. m., when other schools open.

Many Applicants.

More than a dozen applicants are seeking the Central principalship, it was learned yesterday. Several junior high school principals have been mentioned for the promotion, one of whom, Lester Walter, principal of Powell Junior High, is backed by several P.-T. A and citizens' groups. L. G. Hoover, assistant principal at Central, also has been indorsed by civic organizations.

Thompson Advance Approved by Board

The promotion of Detective E. E. Thompson, of the First Precinct, to the rank of detective sergeant was approved by the District Commissioners yesterday. Thompson will be sworn in today.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, who recommended Thompson, said he will fill the vacancy left by the retirement of Detective Sergt. William Wright. Thompson will receive additional compensation of $360 annually.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said he would assign Thompson to temporary duty in the Eighth Precinct in place of Sergt. Eugene Lambert, who is ill.

Mrs. Zioncheck Back in Capital To Face Trial

Posts $25 Collateral, Will Answer Landlady's Assault Charge.

Dressed in mourning, Mrs. Marion A. Zioncheck, widow of Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, of Washington, who ended his life by a leap from an office building window in Seattle last summer, returned to the Capital yesterday.

She posted $25 collateral prior to facing an assault charge in Police Court Friday. The charge was brought against her by Mrs. Benjamin Scott Young, from whom the youthful Representative leased an apartment at Harvard Hall. A similar charge, against the Congressman whose antics amazed Washington for several months before his suicide in Seattle, was nolle prossed.

Upon her arrival here, the former Rubye Nix, of Texarkana, Tex., immediately got in touch with her husband's closest friend, Kenneth Romney, House sergeant at arms, and went into a conference with him.

It was revealed last night that two days before the legislator died he told his wife:

"If anything ever happens to me, remember Kenneth Romney is the only true friend I have in the world."

It was Romney, it was learned last night, who advised the young widow to return to Washington and answer the charges.

3 Men Are Seized On Lottery Charge

Charges of operating a lottery and conspiracy to violate the lottery laws were placed against three men yesterday after their arrest at Sixth street and New York avenue northwest.

The men charged are George D. Cockrell, 42, of the Annapolis Hotel; Samuel Tarver, colored, 42, of 815 Thirteenth street northeast, and John A. Flagg, 28, of 902 Thirteenth street northeast.

According to Sergt. George Deyoe and Detective Roy E. Blick, who arrested the men, a quantity of alleged "numbers" slips and marked money was found on each man. Nearly 20 punchboards were found in Cockrell's automobile, Detective Blick said.

City's Crime On Increase, Hepbron Told

Facilities to Combat Underworld Here Held Lacking.

Washington is a potential crime center.

Inadequate laws literally protect the criminal.

But the city is governed by honest and efficient officials—attempting to control a perplexing problem under severe handicaps.

These were facts presented to James M. Hepbron, noted crime authority, as an aroused public rallied to support the Washington Criminal Justice Association yesterday.

Hepbron, acting director of the crime group, pledged tireless efforts for investigation of every fact laid before his office and expressed encouragement at evident support of Washington citizens.

And at the same time, Lieut. John Fowler, ballistics expert of the Metropolitan Police Department, agreed to assist in the association's plans to promote criminal justice after completing an exhaustive study of Washington's crime problems.

Lieut. Fowler's study, covering more than a month's period, was devoted to crime control through the use of improved record systems. His proposals, designed to aid law enforcement administration, are now before Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, for approval.

Hepbron's appointment as acting director of the criminal justice body was lauded yesterday by various civic and business groups, among them the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Answering the federation's plea for consideration of vital points in the battle to control crime, Hepbron said his fact-finding inquiry would cover every angle of the Washington situation—from crime report to court disposition.

The federation, in a letter signed by Wilbur LaRoe, jr., assailed local police and court facilities and described Washington's major penal institution as "a training school for crime."

Inadequate quarters housing the Police Department, it was pointed out, reduces operating efficiency and lowers morale. Police headquarters, the letter said, is "little more than an old barn."

During his study of local crime conditions, Lieut. Fowler, a student of criminal justice, devised a record system furnishing administrative officials of his department with means of controlling the work of individual policemen and for analysis of problems with which the department is confronted.

In a report of his findings to Maj. Brown, Lieut. Fowler pointed out that approximately 58 per cent of the total number of criminal cases are never solved.

Policeman Is Sued In 'Wanton' Killing Of D. C. Girl's Dog

Alleged to have "wantonly" shot a water spaniel dog belonging to Grace Riley, 477 F street southwest, Policeman Oscar E. Allen, attached to the Fourth Precinct, was named defendant in a $5,000 damage suit file in District court yesterday.

Mrs. Riley, in a complaint filed through Attorney Lowell J. Bradford, asserted the dog, Tippy, was accompanying her daughter in an alley adjacent to their F street home when the policeman shot and killed the animal.

Because of the death of Tippy Mrs. Riley said she "had lost an asset of great money value and has been deprived permanently of the companionship" of the dog. Policeman Allen is said to have reported he shot Tippy when the spaniel attacked him.

Nurse Service Plans Revealed By Dr. Ruhland

Four Offices to Be Opened Monday, When School Term Begins.

Plans for a general nursi g service to be launched when the public schools open Monday were announced yesterday by Health Officer George C. Ruhland.

Four district offices will be located at the following places: District Building, room 13; Gage School, Second and U streets northwest; Seventh Police Precinct, 3216 Volta place northwest; Friendship House, 326 Virginia avenue southeast.

The nursing staff, when completed, will number 74, including a director, 4 supervisors and 64 field workers. A group of the nurses will be assigned full time to special services, such as ambulance, immunization, clinic and child hygiene stations.

Dr. Ruhland, in announcing the plans for the school year, pointed out that the number of available nurses is far below the standard set by the National Organization for Public Health Nursing. This standard requires one nurse for 2,000 to 2,500 residents.

"This standard would demand approximately 237 to 300 nurses for Washington, with a population of 594,000," he said.

"At the present there are 139 public health nurses, 60 authorized by the health department and 71 in private agencies. As the morbidity and mortality rates for Washington are high, judged by the rates for the United States as a whole and for large cities, the larger number of approximately 300 nurses, or 160 over our present number, is definitely indicated if the needs are to be adequately met."

Driver, Held Year in Jail, Awaits Trial

Granted Fifth Delay on Negligent Homicide Charge by Court.

The District Police Court yesterday continued for the fifth time trial of Morgan Glaze, 27, colored, held under the negligent homicide act since September, 1935.

Glaze already has faced 33 traffic charges since 1926, 19 under his own name and 14 under the name of Aaron Cash, said by police to be an alias.

He was charged with negligent homicide in the death of Mrs. Mary Hausenfluck, 79, hit by an automobile near her home in the 1300 block of Euclid street the night of September 5, 1935. She was the widow of the Rev. John Hausenfluck.

According to information given Assistant U. S. Attorney David A. Hart by Detective Sergt. William J. Liverman, of the homicide squad, the accident accurred as the elderly woman walked toward a street car safety zone at Fourteenth and Euclid streets. Glaze, officials said, drove on the left side of the zone.

The coroner's jury acted four days after the fatal accident, but the case was not called in Police Court until the last day in October. At this time Glaze, who gave his address as the 400 block of M street northwest, pleaded not guilty and requested a jury trial. At this time bond was set at $1,000.

The case then came before Judge John P. McMahon, and attorneys for Glaze—who, police said, had given his name as Cash—obtained a five-day continuance.

Then, on November 18 the case was continued until December 7, and on December 7 it was continued until December 9.

The hearing later was set for December 28, and on this date the case was called by Judge Walter J. Casey, who took the matter under advisement and allowed Glaze's attorneys 10 days in which to file briefs.

Next action came on last June 26, when Judge Casey overruled the demurrer, and sent the papers back to the clerk's office for reassignment.

The case then was called for Judge Isaac Hitt on the first of this month, when it was again sent to the clerk's office for reassignment—this time, however, with a notation calling for its return within two weeks.

When his attorney yesterday claimed he did not know the case was coming up, a delay until September 29 was granted.

Survey Finds Wage Earner In Better Way

Conference Board Reports Status of Women Even Exceeds That of Men.

New York, Sept. 15.—There has been considerable improvement in the economic status of American wage earners since 1914, according to a study just published by the National Industrial Conference Board.

The board's study, 'Wages, Hours, and Employment in the United States, 1914-1936," shows that average hours of work in manufacturing are approximately 23 per cent lower than they were in 1914, while average weekly earnings in June, 1936, after adjustment to take into account changes in the cost of living, are shown to be 39 per cent higher.

The status of women workers has improved more than that of men, according to the board's figures. Women have benefited from a reduction of about 30 per cent in hours of work since 1914, compared with a reduction of 23 per cent for men. The "real" weekly earnings of women have increased 39 per cent and those of men 37 per cent.

There are also indications that women suffered less from curtailed employment during the depression. In the spring of 1933 the average work-week of women had declined only 22.9 per cent, while that of men had declined 35.4 per cent from the 1929 level. By June, 1936, however, the number of hours worked by female labor increased only 23 per cent, although the average work-week of male labor rose 26.8 per cent. In June, 1936, the "real" weekly earnings of women were 0.2 per cent above, and those of men, 0.3 per cent below, the 1929 levels.

$104,697,000 Offered For Treasury Bills

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced yesterday that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, dated September 16, 1936, and maturing June 16, 1937, which were offered on September 11, were opened at the Federal Reserve banks on September 14.

The total amount applied for was $104,697,000, of which $50,022,000 was accepted. Except for one bid of $50,000, the accepted bids ranged in price from 99.905, equivalent to a rate of about 0.125 per cent per annum, to 99.881, equivalent to a rate of about 0.157 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

Only part of the amount bid for at the latter price was accepted. The average price of Treasury bills to be issued is 99.889 and the average rate is about 0.146 per cent on a bank discount basis.

Federal Corporation Puts Their Deposit Index at 97 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

The 14,055 commercial banks having Federal deposit insurance were reported yesterday to have increased security holdings, loans and discounts and deposits during the year ended June 30. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation said these banks hold 97 per cent of total deposits in all commercial banks.

Assets of the institutions were listed at $53,600,000,000 on last June 30, an increase of 13 per cent in 12 months. Bank loans and discounts rose 4 per cent to $15,000,000,000 and holdings of other than Government securities were fixed at $7,500,000,000, a rise of 11 per cent.

Government obligations, both direct and fully guaranteed, totaled $14,800,000,000, an increase of 20 per cent during the year.

A 16 per cent increase in aggregate deposits brought this figure to $47,000,000,000 on last June. "Demand deposits continued to increase at a more rapid rate than time and savings deposits," the FDIC said, adding that demand deposits of individualss, partnerships and corporations rose 19 per cent during the year and time and savings deposits 6 per cent.

Stocks Rally on Maine Election, Then Settle Back; Francs Under Pressure.

New York, Sept. 15.—Stocks pleased no one. Trading volume was too small to satisfy commission brokers and price movements were too mixed to suit either bull or bear. It required only a few minutes and price advances of fractions to a point to mark off the Maine election results. From that time until closing trading was dull and narrow, ending with a slightly firmer tone but a slight loss of ground for a majority of stocks. Bonds were irregular. December wheat closed an eighth of a cent lower at 111⅜ cents a bushel.

Since so much discussion over the Maine election had taken place, many had expected that the news of the Republican success would bring a sharp forward drive in stocks. Opening prices, to be sure, were moderately higher, but the market soon relapsed into the dull, shiftless performance of the past two or three weeks. So far as the majority of speculators were concerned, Maine proved to be scarcely more of an event than the routine fireside talks of the New Dealers or the usual political speeches of others.

Explanation.

Reasons advanced mostly by the bulls for the apathy of the market were (1) that the Republican gains in Maine were not large enough to give reassurance of a Nation-wide upset of the New Deal in November, and that at any rate they fell below the optimistic predictions in some quarters of a two-for-one or even three-for-one vote; (2) that the stock market already had discounted Republican gains in Maine, and to a considerable extent, a Nation-wide victory in the autumn; (3) that bull traders are not yet ready to go into stocks in a big way, because the effort would have to be sustained too long between now and election; (4) that the disquieting state of affairs abroad, particularly with reference to gold standard currencies, is acting as a brake on speculative operations.

Francs continued today at the gold export point, and were all free and above board no doubt a large exodus of the metal would take place. Some driblets are going from Paris, but that may be for the purpose of keeping up a pretense of the gold standard as much as anything else. If in fact gold is under an unofficial ban, the official action may not be far distant.

Fate of Franc.

In the opinion of some well informed people on this side, France already has delayed too long the devaluation of the franc, to the harm of French business and white-collar population. Added to the pressure from those who can't stand deflation are now the political difficulties over communism and the growing menace of war to the east.

Just what effect on our financial markets devaluation of the franc would have is difficult to say, but for a while at least a new element of uncertainty would be thrown into the hopper. That would tend to put a brake on securities and perhaps to foreign trade as well. Out of the mess all round currency stabilization would ensue, and action might be precipitated by realistic action by the French and the other gold bloc countries. At any rate it does not look as though demand for gold would fall in the open market; but if the debacle of the franc meant another experience with currency depreciation in many countries, the value of gold in terms of commodities would depreciate, and the cost of mining it would rise.

Meanwhile a little theorizing has been stirred up in home waters over a bit of a twist given by President Roosevelt to the observations of Mr. Knox on the position of insurance companies which hold large amounts of government bonds. A little fuel to the fire was added today by George V. McLaughlin, president of the Brooklyn Trust Co. In effect Mr. McLaughlin Trust that the banks had been compelled to lend far too much to a single borrower—the United States Government—and that as a result they "had the bull by the tail."

Insurance Meeting.

It had been expected that the delegates to the President's insurance company conference would stand up for the solvency of their companies, which in any event no one doubts. The intention of Mr. Knox obviously had been to show dangers ahead of the Government's policy. Some Wall street people incidentally wondered why the conference was so scantily represented by the large and strong New England insurance institutions.

Business Borrowing.

A further gain in miscellaneous and commercial loans was the highlight of the figures of reporting member banks in 101 cities as of September 9, the rise being $49,000,000. As the figures of New York banks disclosed last week, $22,000,000 of the increase was in the New York district. Brokers' loans were swelled by $70,000,000 because of buying of Government securities by dealers in anticipation of exchanging them for the new issue today. The banks disposed of $13,000,000 of their own Government securities and added $9,000,000 of other securities. Reserves increased $27,000,000 and cash in vault rose $23,000,000. Federal fund transactions showed up in an increase of $23,000,000 in loans to banks and, on the liability side, in an $18,000,000 rise in borrowings. Deposits changed little in the week, demand deposits adjusted rising $51,000,000, while domestic bank deposits with other banks increased $41,000,000.

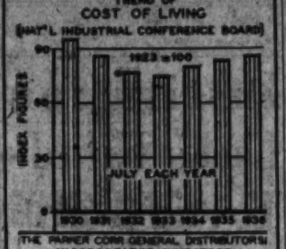
Expenses for Living Mounting Steadily



Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 15.—The living costs of wage earners in this country continue to go up. Compared with a year ago it now costs 3½ per cent more to buy our living necessities. Food prices have advanced nearly 5 per cent in the last year, and are 40 per cent higher than the low point in March, 1933.

Rents have gone up steadily and are nearly 11 per cent higher than a year ago. Fortunately, the costs of clothing, gas and electricity have actually declined.

Foreign Purchases Boost Copper Price

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—A new wave of foreign copper buying swept the export price to 9.90 cents a pound today, the highest level since April 20, 1931, when the metal sold at 10.05 cents.

Increased armament programs by virtually all European countries has formed the backbone of the foreign demand for the past several months and the addition of Poland to the ranks of rearming countries is believed by trade circles to have touched off the new rush of buying.

World stocks of refined copper are not expected by the trade to show much increase as a result of the stepping up of foreign production by 5 per cent.

Late Rallies Boom Chicago Grain Prices

Canadian Wheat Paves Way for Pick Up Near Close.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—Big export buying of Canadian wheat led to late rallies of Chicago grain prices today, and in many cases more than overcame earlier losses.

It was estimated wheat exporters had bought in excess of 2,250,000 bushels today from Canada of which 1,800,000 bushels were for Italy. In addition, talk was current that France, Great Britain and other European countries will be forced sooner or later to make large purchases of wheat in Canada.

Wheat in Chicago closed irregular at virtually the day's top level, ¼ off to ½ up compared with yesterday's finish. September 113@113¼, December 111⅜@111½, May 110½@110⅝, corn ¼ to ¾ advanced, September 113½, December 95½@95⅝, May 91@91⅛ oats ⅛ to ¼ off, December 42¼, and rye showing ¼ to ½ bulge, December 81⅞. Provisions results were unchanged to 10 cents down.

Peacock Upsets British Golf Ace As Favorites Fall

Emery, Yates, Somerville Among Stars Beaten in U. S. Amateur.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Garden City Golf Club, Garden City, L. I., Sept. 15.—With a smashing 3-hole comeback that dazzled his distinguished opponent and a gallery of several hundred, Roger Peacock, 25-year-old Washington golf star, defeated Dr. William Tweddell, British Walker Cup captain, 1 up, in a thrill-packed match to enter the third round of the National Amateur championship here today.

Peacock's rousing, last-ditch rally for one of the most exciting victories of the 64 matches on the bill was followed by some impressive stroking by another District challenger, 29-year-old Levi Yoder, of Kenwood Golf and Country Club, who eliminated Alan Smith, seasoned Asheville, N. C., campaigner, 5 and 3.

Webb, Burnett Bow.

Two other Washingtonians—Tommy Webb, jr., of Washington Golf and Country Club, and Volney Burnett, Indian Spring's fire-fighter, were eliminated after bitter matches.

Ralph Strafaci, of Brooklyn, who yesterday put out District Champion Bobby Brownell, beat Webb, 2 and 1. Don Armstrong, of Chicago, who two years ago was trimmed by Lawson Little in the Amateur semifinals, turned the heat on Burnett on the last three holes to win, 3 and 2.

Peacock is in the second quarter and Yoder in the fourth quarter.

If ever a golfer showed that he was a fighter when there was only a ray of hope left, Peacock was that man today.

On Sixteenth, Two Down.

For the smooth-stroking Congressional ace stepped to the sixteenth tee this afternoon 2 down and 3 to go the 1927 British Amateur champion.

That is a heck of a predicament to be in," Peacock remarked to the handsome physician-surgeon from Stourbridge. "But I guess the best thing I can do is to keep stroking." And that Peacock did.

He stroked his tee shot on that sixteenth away over to the right in a flock of bunkers, while Tweddell split the middle of the fairway. Peacock's second dropped into the rough to the right of the green, and Tweddell was just "about in," as they say. But Tweddell hit his second into a trap, blasted over the green into another, and went back into a trap to wind up with a six, while Peacock safely played for his five.

On the seventeenth Peacock reached the green in three blows for his five, while Tweddell, still thinking about those traps on the Garden City Golf Club, Garden City, L. I., Sept. 15.—There are 64 golfers left in the battle for the National Amateur championship, and, according to the way this hazardous, nerve-testing course plays, any one of 'em is good enough to be crowned champion of these United States by Saturday night.

Favorites and Walker Cup golfers fell almost in droves in second-round play today, as one of the most astounding of the day's upsets was furnished by a District player, Roger Peacock, Congressional Club ace.

Young Peacock, stepping up to the sixteenth tee, 2 down and 3 to go, proceeded to plaster an expression of amazement over the face of his distinguished foe, Dr. William Tweddell, captain of the British Walker Cup team. The gallery was no less thrilled as the youth walked off the course at the match's end, a 1-up victor over the Britisher.

Levi Yoder, of Kenwood, was the only other survivor from the Capital City as Claude Rippy, Tommy Webb, jr., and Volney Burnett lost stirring battles and their places in the tournament.

The defending champion Lawson Little, isn't present because he's a business man golfer these days, but the husky young chap from Oklahoma, Garrulous Walter Emery, who lost to the Californian in last year's finals, is out of the picture, as are two of his Walker Cup teammates, five of the British Walker Cup stars, and three former National Amateur champions.

Emery, who has failed to break 80 in two matches, went to the guillotine under steel-gray skies in today's mad scramble, conquered by the Canadian, Gordon Taylor, jr., and one of three foreigners left in the fight, by 2 up.

Yates Is Beaten.

Emery tried to make a comeback, with defeat staring him in the face. He was one down standing on the eighteenth tee, but even as you and I, he dumped his five iron shot 20 yards into the lake, and he reached into his bag for another ball like a man about to walk the last mile. And there's your Walker Cup star.

That sandy-haired drawlin' Atlanta ace, Charlie Yates, who made par at Pine Valley look quite fragile in the Walker Cup matches, lost to a 43-year-old wrinkle-faced hotel owner, Judd Brumley, of Knoxville, Tenn., who has qualified several times in the Washington district.

Brumley clipped Gawjuh's Yates on the twentieth hole with a spectacular birdie deuce, and his Boswell, O. B. Keeler, started to shed tears.

Just half an hour before Yates went out on the second extra hole, favorite that he was, Reynolds (Extra Hole) Smith, of Dallas, who was America's ace in the Walker Cup matches, lost to Bill Holt, a Syracuse automobile salesman you never heard of also by one up. Holt's birdie four on the seventeenth was just too much for the Texan.

Somerville Upset.

In the morning another upset occurred. Pint-sized 20-year-old, bespectacled Davie Davis, from Tyler, Tex., tore into Ross (Sandy) Somerville, 1932 amateur champion from Canada, and won, 3 and 2, with golf that was nothing to brag about.

Mr. Somerville, who shot a 31 the other day in a practice round, and who is considered by Bobby Jones a master with the iron, was guilty of bogey fives on hole after hole, and the little junior from University of Texas pranced around the course without pressing once.

Two other erstwhile amateur title holders—Jess Guilford, the Boston siege gun, and Jess Sweetser, of New York—fell in the heat of today's nightmare rounds.

Goodman Man to Beat.

Walter Blevins, a little, pale-faced alternate from Kansas City wearing a blue sweater as a token of good luck, put out Sweetser, 2 and 1, and Guilford lost to the tournament favorite, Omaha's Johnny Goodman, 4 and 3.

Blevins, a night watchman, had to borrow 100 bucks to get here, and, now that he's here things are certainly shaping up in a cheerful way.

Goodman played the same kind of golf that characterized his first round victory yesterday, and he may be the boy to beat for the title. His irons were splitting the pin on every hole, and he won four of the last six holes to end the battle with a 2 over par performance on the fifteenth green.

Charlie Mayo, New Yorker, conqueror of Fred Haas, yesterday took Don Soccoli, of New Haven, on the nineteenth. Gus Moreland, was even par, in his 6 and 4 victory over Leo Brown, of Boston.

Two youngsters who attended schools in Washington, are in the third round. Joe Lynch, former Georegtown University captain, who put out Mike Palacio, of Lakeside, Calif., 3 and 2, and Frank Allen, one-time Georgetown Prep captain, who made a marvelous comeback to down Bill Deupree, of Concinnati, on the nineteenth.

Braddock Return Is 2 Months Off

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 15.—The New York State Athletic Commission heard second-hand today that Jimmy Braddock's injured hand was showing satisfactory improvement.

Braddock was to have reported to the commission in person today to tell the solons about the injury which led to postponement of his heavyweight title match with Max Schmeling.

Instead, the commission received a letter from Dr. Fred Albee, who has been with Braddock at the Florida Medical Center in Venice, Fla. Dr. Albee reported Braddock improving, but said it would be inadvisable for him to resume training for at least two months.

Giants Appear Certain to Win Flag; Card's Task Too Heavy

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 15.—Although there's still nearly two weeks to go in this dizzy National League race, from the looks of today's standings and the remainder of the schedule, the task of catching the Giants seems almost an impossibility.

Of course, anything can happen—as it has been since midseason—but the Giants, with a 4½-game lead over the second-place Cardinals and with 13 games to play to the Gas House Gang's 12, appear as safe as money in the bank.

As things stand now—with the entire National League program rained out today—if the Giants play only a shade over .500 ball, winning 7 and losing 6, the Cardinals would have to take 11 of their 12 starts.

But, since 6 of those 12 remaining games for St. Louis are with the always dangerous Chicago Cubs, and inasmuch as the Cards' pitching is riddled through, except for Dizzy Dean, the task appears far too great, even for as tough an outfit as the Cardinals.

At the same time the Giants, after getting by two more games with the Pirates, meet only second-division clubs the rest of the way.

Yank Sluggers Halt Chisox, 7-1; Jump Lead

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—The New York Yankees, seeking to create an all-time American League record for a pennant-winner's lead over the rest of the pack, shot 18½ games in front again today by clubbing the White Sox, 7 to 1.

The victory stopped the seven-game winning streak of the Sox, but did not drop them from second place in the loop.

Newsom Fans 11 As Nats Subdue Browns, 13-7, 6-1

Hurler Fans 11 in Nightcap Halted After 7th Inning; Whitehill Credited With Victory in Opener; Now 2 Games From Second.

By a Special Correspondent.

St. Louis, Sept. 15.—With the hot breath of Detroit's Tigers flush on their collective necks and themselves in hot pursuit of Chicago's unholy White Sox, Washington lifted itself back into the thick of the battle for second place today by taking both ends of a double-header with St. Louis, winning by the football figures of 13-7 in the first game, and 6-1 in the nightcap. The finale was curtailed at the end of the seventh inning because of darkness. A tremendous cheering throng of 500 witnessed the two encounters.

The joint pitching efforts of Earl Whitehill and Jimmy DeShong were required to win the curtain-raiser, but blustery Buck Newsom took care of the home talent all by himself in the second, and turned in a masterful performance. Big Buck's fast ball was made for occasions like that second game. The light began failing after the third inning and Buck's fast 'un had the Brownies going down like bowling pins. He fanned eleven in all, and was getting better as the game progressed.

Whitehill Starts Rally.

Four singles, an inkling of the impending deluge, gave the Nats their initial run in the first inning; and but for an ill-fated attempt at a double steal, and Freddy Sington's slowness afoot, they might have had at least two more. Chapman and Hill singled, but Ben was out trying to make third as Hill moved up to second. Sington singled Hill home, but was caught at third himself, a few minutes later, trying to reach the far corner on Kress' single.

The Browns went their guests one better. Lary leading off with a clean, and painful hit in his ribs. He went to third on Clift's single and scored when Solters popped up to Chapman. Bell and Bottomley walked filling the bases, and Clift scored when West forced "Sunny Jim" at second.

Whitehill touched off the spark igniting the big second-inning rally, driving a hard single to center for the first run, but a couple of St. Louis errors actually got the uprising under way. Bluege was safe on Clift's error and then made second when Lary dropped Hemsley's peg. Mihalic fanned, but Hogan coaxed a pass before Whitehill pasted one of Hogsett's fast ones, Hogan going all the way to second on the blow. Chapman walked,

Owens Banned, Track Meet Is Called Off

Caledonian Games Off as A. A. U. Warns Negro Can't Compete.

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 14.—The Caledonian games scheduled for Thursday night at the Yankee Stadium were called off tonight due to the warning of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union that Jesse Owens, Olympic sprint star, must not be advertised and could not compete.

The announcement came after the metropolitan division of the A. A. U. had moved against the suspended Negro triple Olympic victor who was suspended for failure to go through with a post-Olympic track meet in Stockholm after he allegedly had agreed to compete there.

Promoters of the meet decided that without Owens, although a large number of other star entries had been received, there was no point in holding the games. James A. Hoey, chairman of the Caledonia Club's games committee, announced the decision.

The warning against advertising Owens' entry in the games apparently was the answer of the A. A. U. to the recommendation made Monday by the Ohio district board of the A. A. U. Owens is an Ohio State runner and broad jumper.

Other Olympic and track stars who had been scheduled to compete included Earl Meadows and George Varoff, pole vaulters; Gene Venzke, Glenn Cunningham and Archie San Romani, mile aces, and Jack Torrance, Louisiana shot puter.

We picked smokers at random from the crowd . . . gave each two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another, representing the leading nationally advertised brands.

No names or familiar bands on the cigars . . . not a thing to prejudice the smokers . . . Taste alone counted. Each man smoked both cigars, then indicated the one he liked best. 77% preferred the mellow flavor of Vintage White Owl.

Wherever you are, you can get the same mild, uniform cigar that won these taste tests. It costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.

● No one field can always produce good tobacco. In a Vintage year, the leaf is richer, more full-bodied. In our really mild White Owl Cigar, we use only tobacco of Vintage quality. That means special buying.

● White Owl's Crop Inspection System, the only known organization of its kind, keeps a check on growing conditions in the finest filler-tobacco districts in America. We know where Vintage tobacco is maturing and buy the best of it for White Owl.

● Aging by nature! . . . an average of three years. No economical short cuts . . . no secret processes. Vintage tobacco tastes good in its natural state—doesn't need artificial treatment.

Ted Wright to Coach All-Stars for Game With Giants Here

Former Pro Has Strong Material

College Team Includes Former Aces From Nearby Schools.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The organization of one of the most powerful and colorful all-college elevens ever assembled in Washington virtually was completed last night when Ted Wright, nee Jimmy Bankhead, signed to coach the team in preparation for its game with the New York Giants, October 1, at Griffith Stadium.

Officials in charge of the game had sought a capable coach with a thorough knowledge of professional football for the post, and in Wright they evidently found their man. He spent two years in the National League, with Boston and Brooklyn, starring with both clubs, and knows all the wrinkles. He is the ideal man for the job and should turn out an eleven capable of giving the Eastern champions stubborn opposition.

Wright enrolled at George Washington a couple of years ago, after starring for Texas State and making several all-American teams in his senior year. He did not play for the Colonials, however, but went into pro football instead. In 1932, while at Texas, he led the national scoring list with 117 points, which included three field goals.

Played Against Giants.

While in the National League he played against the Giants five times, but never succeeded in winning against them. The closest game resulted in a 3-0 victory for the Giants. This time, however, Wright feels fate may deal him a better hand and he may finally turn the tables on his old rivals. He will have an abundance of capable material to work with, including a line that averages over 200 pounds.

Wright could be playing pro football today if he hadn't decided on a baseball career instead. Both the Pittsburgh Pirates and New York Yankees offered him contracts, but he refused, preferring not to run the risk of injury. He played ball with Danville in the Bi-State League and will receive a trial with the Boston Red Sox next season.

First meeting of the All-Stars will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the George Washington University gym, where Wright will greet his new charges and put them through a blackboard drill. Practice will begin the latter part of this week, although a site has not been selected.

Players already signed for the game include Kinsey Jones, Detroit University quarterback last season; Joe Meglen, of Georgetown; Hilleary Lee, 240-pound tackle; Barney Fleegle, another 200-pound tackle from Western Maryland; Bill Parrish, Arnold Bennefield, Don Bomba, Harry Deming, Finis Parrish, Earl Dunlap and Ben Plotnicki. Bill Parrish, 193-pound end, will be the lightest man on the squad.

against six defeats, but he was not around when the game ended. Center Fielder Larry Rosenthal, of the Sox, beating out a hit in the eighth inning, with Pearson covering first, stepped on Pearson's ankle while crossing the bag and injured him seriously enough to require his leaving the game.

Johnny Broaca finished the pitching job for the Yanks, and between him and Pearson allowed the Sox only a half dozen hits. The Yanks walloped three Sox pitchers for 14 hits, with Joe DiMaggio, Red Rolfe and George Selkirk getting three apiece to set the pace.

Sugar Cain, the Sox starting pitcher, who was belted out during a 3-run game-clinching rally by the Yanks in the fourth, was charged with the defeat.

Baltimore, Sept. 15 (AP).—Albert J. Goodman, Annapolis attorney, filed suit against the Athletic Association of the United States Naval Academy in Federal Court today asking $15,000 damage for Elise Wilson, who alleged she was struck and injured by a ball at the Army-Navy baseball game, May 30.

Reeves, Weinberg Star In G. W. Practice Tilt

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Camp Letts, Md., Sept. 15.—George Washington University's huskies pushed the accelerator all the way to the floor today in a bruising practice game played under actual game conditions and the net result was a 6-6 tie for the teams and a hatful of satisfaction for Head Coach Jim Pixlee.

So evenly matched that getting through the line was like hauling a bale of cotton through a barbed wire entanglement, the boys fought up and down the field with neither side gaining a decided advantage. The game was tonic for ailing Jim Pixlee, who foresaw a plentiful supply of reserve talent that could step into any breach and hold its own with the enemy.

Herb Reeves, bone-cracking halfback from the Ozarks, starred for his team, ploughing under one side of the line in a touchdown drive late in the second period. Despite the fact that he is still in a considerably weakened condition because of serum injections, Reeves showed more drive and spirit than any back on the field. He looked a 1-100 bet to win a regular position. Injections are being given him as precaution against rabies. He was attacked by a mad dog several weeks ago.

The prize discovery of the afternoon, however, was Izzy Weinberg, another powerful halfback, who exploded off tackle, cut back and romped 50 yards for the score that tied the game. A brother of Henry Weinberg, who starred at guard for Duquesne several years ago, young Izzy made several sizable gains through the enemy and a lasting impression on the coaches during the afternoon.

The rival backfields were Jenkins, quarter; Reeves and Mahan, halves; and Turner, fullback, versus Weinberg, quarter; Kaufman and Tihila, halves, and Merka, fullback.

Leon Morris, reserve end, was sent to the George Washington University Hospital suffering from an undiagnosed malady. He was running a high fever and it was deemed advisable to take precautions.

Agriculture Softball Team Loses in Tourney

Chicago, Sept. 16 (AP).—The Department of Agriculture women's softball team of Washington, D. C., was eliminated from the national women's softball championships here today by Buffalo, N. Y., 21 to 1. It was a quarter-final round game.

The Washington girls gained the round of eight yesterday by swamping the North Dakota team, 24 to 9. Washington's entrant in the men's championships, Erhlich's Poultrymen, were eliminated earlier in the tournament by St. oseph's, of Detroit, Mich., by a 2-to-1 score.

Guyon, Jr., Seen Future Star For C. U.

Eighteen-year-old Joe Guyon, jr., a living bronze image of his famous dad, whose very name struck terror in the hearts of his football foes two decades ago, will enter Catholic University this autumn and already is practicing with the football team, it was learned yesterday. He will continue to work out with the varsity until candidates for the freshman team are called to the colors.

Over 6 feet tall, packing 185 pounds of bone and muscle, young Guyon has been admirably fitted by nature to follow in his dad's footsteps, but he faces a tremendous task if he expects to live up to his pater's reputation. The boy is a halfback and a triple-threater. He is shifty afoot and fast, possesses a pair of ham-like hands that can whip a football around like a baseball, and kicks the pig's hide prodigious distances. He seems to have the makings of a star.

Guyon Not Too Sure.

But cagey old Charley Guyon—the uncle with whom he has been making his home—refuses to predict a brilliant future for his nephew. "Chief" think the boy will be a fair to middling gridman, but as for starring, well, he's seen too many good ones spoiled by too much publicity before they proved their mettle. He hopes the newshawks forget Joe for a while, at least until Coach "Dutch" Bergman has a chance to do something with him. Then if he makes the grade Uncle Charley will be sitting right up in "A" row, shouting:

"Come on, you Joe, show 'em something."

Joe, senior, recently accepted a position in the Federal Government and has departed for his new post on the Winnebago Indian reservation, in Nebraska. He will have charge of the athletic program for two high schools as well as that of the adult population.

The club men's doubles tournament will begin Saturday, September 26, and the women's singles Saturday, October 3. Tournaments for boys, girls and married couples will be announced later by Harry Howlett, club professional.

Howell Draws Ahead in Net Play Here

The only unseeded survivor in the fourth annual men's United States Government tennis championships, Spencer Howell, former George Washington University netman, drew one step ahead of the field yesterday to enter the semi-finals with a 6—0, 6—0 victory over George Botts, jr.

A trio of promising matches for this afternoon all but overshadow the Howell victory, however, with no less than six seeded entrants hammering away at each other on the Potomac Park courts.

Ralph McElvenny, husky attorney for Security and Exchange Commission, and 1933 champion, encounters Morgan ("Happy") Jacobs, erstwhile Georgetown University player, at 4:30 p. m. McElvenny is seeded No. 2, and Jacobs No. 8. The latter has waded into the quarter-finals in impressive fashion, without losing a set, but McElvenny, considered by many the choice to lift Tony Latona's championship, is heavily favored to win.

Walker Gets Tie For 3d in Hitting

By the Associated Press.

Gerald Walker, of the Tigers, climbed into a third-place tie with Bill Dickey, of the Yankees, in the American League trio of baseball's "big six," although they, as well as the two pace-setters, Luke Appling, of the White Sox, and Earl Averill, of the Indians, all lost ground. Walker got one hit in four times at bat to fall one percentage point to .360, while Dickey hit safely once in five times up to fall two points to the same average. Appling, hitless in four chances, sank three percentage points to .381. All the National League leaders were idle.

The standings (first three places in each league):

Only 72 Report, Crisler Moans 'Shortage'

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 15.—Seventy-two candidates for the Princeton football team answered the call for opening practice today, but Coach Fritz Crisler bemoaned a lack of adequate reserves.

All was not gloom in the coaching outlook, however, for example, "there's a lot of ends and we don't know yet who's who."

Someone suggested that, judging by the bulk of some of the regulars, Crisler shouldn't need a large number of reserves.

The Tiger awoke from its summer lethargy and started limbering up its muscles for the gridiron wars with vim. Practice was held both morning and afternoon, with live tackling part of the first day's program.

The long morning session was devoted primarily to interpretation of the Crisler shift for the benefit of the flock of sophomore hopefuls. The afternoon brought forth blocking, passing, kicking and tackling classes.

Rose Captures Auto Race at Syracuse

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Maurie Rose, of Indianapolis, won the 100-mile New York State Fair automobile race today in the fast time of one hour, 12 minutes and 50:11 seconds.

Rose drove his orange and black racer, bearing the huge number 32, around the 100 laps of the fair grounds' dirt track in the average time of 82.31 miles per hour.

The winner took the lead at the seventieth mile, closely followed by Connors and Mays, and never was headed into the finishing lap.

A smashup at the first turn of the first lap threw three cars out of the race, but all three drivers escaped injury. They were Chet Gardner, of Long Beach, Calif.; "Wild Bill" Cummings, of Indianapolis, and Wilbur Shaw, of Indianapolis. Deacon Litz, of Dubois, Pa., dropped out of the race with a broken transmission soon after the start.

Billy Winn, of Kansas City, last year's winner, led for the first 50 laps, but coasted into the pits at the half-way mark when his brake rod parted and dragged behind. He had averaged 87 miles an hour for the first 37 miles.

Inexperienced Tech Eleven In Opener

Eight Rookies in Line-up Named for Game in Baltimore.

Tech High's probably starting line-up against Baltimore City College, Saturday night, will number eight newcomers along with three members who saw first-string action last year. The game, incidentally, will be played under the floodlights of Oriole Park, at Baltimore, at 8 p. m.

Breaking a gloomy silence, Coach Hap Hardell came forth yesterday and admitted that he had a probable line-up in mind. Jimmy King and Walter Connolly, regular ends last year, have removed much of the coach's worry about the wing assignments.

Ernest (Whitey) Rawlins, an 185-pound tackle, who sat on the bench most of last season, will pair up with 210-pound Jake Fleischmann, erstwhile Roosevelt High fullback. Big Jake lugged the leather for the Rough Riders last season but decided to transfer to Tech and Coach Hardell promptly nailed him for a tackle berth.

Replacing Francis Preller, All-High guard, and Amerigo Natella, another very good guard, will be a couple of green but high-spirited youngsters named Ball and Pallas, respectively. Hap didn't know their first names. Rodrick (Buddy) Clay, understudy to Moe Schulman, All-High center, last year, will take care of the pivot post as things look right at the present.

Discovery Is Favorite in $25,000 Narragansett Special Today

Time Supply Rules as 2d Choice

Favorite Has Run Fast Practice Trials Since Recent Defeats.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Narragansett Park, R. I., Sept. 15.—New England seems ready to discount the two recent defeats of Discovery and send the son of Display postward a favorite in the third running of the Narragansett Special, Walter O'Hara's $25,000 added stake here tomorrow. Assigned lighter weight than he has carried for some time, Discovery will march postward in a field of nine to compete over the mile and three-sixteenths route. It was at this distance and over this track that the Vanderbilt color-bearer set a world record of 1:55 and that fact is serving to stimulate his backers.

His defeat by Granville in the Saratoga Cup and the beating he took in the Massachusetts Handicap have been offset by the word that "Discovery is right again." Before shipping from Belmont, the cerise and white ace was credited with a workout of 1:50 for a mile and an eighth. In his only real outing here, Discovery went the same route over a track dull from recent rains in 1:53.

New England likes Discovery and Discovery likes the track, so the racegoers say. "Big Red" is the horse to beat in their book and the greenbacks will rustle through the mutuel windows tomorrow afternoon to bear out their confidence.

Time Supply Second Choice.

Frank A. Carreaud's Handicap star, Time Supply, which, ridden by Sonny Workman, seems sure to rule second choice in the wagering. Winner of the first Narragansett special in 1934, winner of the Massachusetts Handicap in 1935, a hard luck loser of the Santa Anita Handicap last winter, the son of Time Maker has a knack of rising to the heighth when the stakes are high, and he has been prepped with consummate skill for tomorrow's effort. His disappointing show on Labor Day might well be tossed out of calculation; he was bumped at the start and turned in a dull effort. All hands are confident of victory tomorrow and it is worthy of note that Time Supply is the horsemen's horse for the special.

The Fox Catcher Farms' representative, Rosemont, will prove another keen factor and may be established as third choice. According to jockeys that rode in the Santa Anita Rodeo, it was Rosemont that suffered most in the scrimmage between Time Supply and Top Row, and it has been often stated Trainer Dick Handlen's charge should have won the big winter handicap. On that occasion Rosemont conceded 2 pounds to Time Supply, today they meet at even weights. Rested for a lengthy period, but with a brace of recent races to sharpen him to top notch, the 4-year-old son of The Porter may lead them all to the wire.

Rushaway Is Fresh.

Rushaway, dual derby winner in the clever sands of A. C. Tarn, has been freshened since his winter efforts and gradually is brought back to the races for this event.

Stand Pat, the raking chestnut owned by E. F. Seagram, is by no means out of it with 113.

The greatly improved Howard and Tugboat Frank will be hard put to it to keep up with the swift pace bound to be set here.

Right at this time Sun Teddy must be ranked the No. 2 3-year-old of the country, and while he seems a trifle high weighted with 117, his connections accepted the impost without a word and are confident he can whip all opponents tomorrow. Sun Teddy will be ridden by Eddie Arcaro.

The special is the fifth race on the card and will go to post at 4:45 or very shortly after. Elaborate arrangements have been made for a record-breaking crowd. Celebrities from all parts of the country are visiting for the race—a gala occasion in New England.

Sullivan Blanks Procurement

Pepco Hurler Yields Only Three Hits

Accounts Meets PWA, Greenbelts, Bankers to Play Today.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Some heavy voltage pitching by Lefty Joe Sullivan of Potomac & Electric Power Co., shocked Procurement Division into a 7-0 defeat yesterday on the South Ellipse and spun the Pepcos into the second round of winning teams in the Post Association week-day play-offs.

With the aid of their southpaw dynamo, who allowed the Federal "AA" League champions but three hits, the Pepcos qualified to meet Naval Air Station, Army and Navy League champions, tomorrow on the South Ellipse.

Today's games take Treasury Accounts and Deposits against Public Work Administration on the south diamond and National Savings & Trust Co., Bankers League champs against Resettlement Greenbelts on the North Ellipse, both games at 4 p. m. Accounts and Deposits, champs of the Sports Center Government League, defeated National Savings, 3-1, in their first meeting while PWA, winners of the Federal "A" League title, nosed out the Greenbelts, Departmental League champs, 4 to 3.

The only thing Procurement Division could procure yesterday was a lot of zeros in the run column. Dynamo Sullivan was using alternating and direct current at intervals and only one man of the Procurement forces could get as far as third off the former Eastern High ace.

Harry Kramer, Procurement center fielder, pounded out a triple in the seventh inning, but the stingy Mr. Sullivan forced Moore, Cauliflower and Roberts to ground out in succession to leave Kramer stranded.

The Pepcos took a lead in the second when Lefty Deck singled to center, took second on Jimmy Chappel's fly to left and scored on D. H. Zirkle's single to left. Roddy Bell walked Frank Cumberland and Zirkle scored when Sullivan rapped out a single. This 2-0 lead grew to 3-0 in the third when Johnny Lee singled, advanced on a bunt and wild pitch and scored on Deck's grounder.

Wesley Bell was knocked out of the box by the Pepcos after five innings and Stan Pearce finished the game. Bell allowed eight of the 11 Pepco hits, three of them by Chaconas, Deck and Zirkle leading a 3-run spree in the fifth.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 15.—With the aid of homers number 39 and 40 by Hal Trosky, and an assortment of 13 other base hits by the rest of his mates, Johnny Allen chalked up his twentieth pitching victory of the year today, hurling the Indians to a 13-to-2 win over the Boston Red Sox.

Trosky was the individual standout, driving in a total of seven runs and getting four hits in four official times at bat. His homer in the sixth scored three runs; another in the eighth accounted for two more, and a double and a single brought in another pair.

Safe at Third But He Was Out at Home on the Play

Lefty Deck, 200-pound, bespectacled first baseman of Potomac & Electric Power, slides as Third Baseman Eddie Miller, of Procurement Division, muffs a throw (arrow indicates ball) in the fifth inning of yesterday's Post Association game on the South Ellipse. Deck tried to score as Miller picked up the ball and threw to second but was caught at the plate.

Peacock, Yoder Only District Survivors

sixteenth, drifted into another from the tee, took four to reach the green, and lost with a six to the Washington boy's par five.

That evened the match, and Mr. Peacock's look of seriousness and dismay turned to a cheery smile.

This eighteenth, with a lake and bunker guarding the green, is a tough par three but Peacock made it look easy by knocking his tee shot 25 feet past the pin, while the English gentleman fired into a trap. He got out beautifully 8 feet from the pin, but Peacock, just missing a deuce, won with a par three, as the Britisher missed his putt. Peacock had overcome the man who last year lost by one up in 36 holes to Lawson Little in the British Amateur.

Yoder Plays Well.

Tweddell even had the jump on Peacock, winning the first with a birdie three and at the turn the Englishman, out in 38, was two up. Then Roger won the tenth and eleventh with perfect par golf, lost the thirteenth with a six to a five, the fifteenth when his tee shot found a trap.

Yoder played consistently fine golf against Smith, winning four holes to go three up at the turn after dropping the first. Out in 39, two over par, Yoder played the next two holes in two over, dumping in a 15-footer for a four on the fifteenth to close out the Carolinian.

30 Gridmen Report For Howard U. Drill

More than 30 Bison gridders reported to Coach Harry Payne yesterday at Howard University Stadium. The coach, a former quarterback at Howard and at Vermont, is confronted with one of the toughest schedules the Bisons have been called to face in many seasons.

The opening game will be at Tuskegee on October 3, followed two weeks later by a clash with Virginia State at Petersburg, unless the Howard board of athletic control decides to place Miner Teachers' College on the schedule for October 10. West Virginia will play at Howard October 24, and Morgan a week later.

Rowe in 18th Victory As A's Bow

Detroit, Sept. 15 (AP).—Schoolboy Rowe chalked up his eighteenth pitching victory today as the Tigers came from behind with a six-run splurge in the fourth inning to clinch an 8-to-5 decision over the Athletics.

Although touched for 11 hits, the same number his Detroit mates collected, Rowe was only in danger in the first, when Bob Johnson's twenty-third homer featured a two-run attack. Pinky Higgins hit his thirteenth four-bagger in the fourth.

An error, a walk, a sacrifice and five hits, three of them doubles, accounted for the six Tiger runs in the big fourth frame.

filling the bases, and Hogsett walked, too, but in an entirely different direction, Al Thomas replacing him.

Thomas passed Hill, forcing Hogan over the plate, and Whitehill also reached home when Kuhel grounded out to Bottomley. Sington continued the assault on St. Louis' battery with another single, scoring Chapman and Hill, and when Kress tripled to right-center, Freddie came home and Thomas went the way of all St. Louis pitchers. Liebhardt took his place on the mound, only to see Kress come home when Bluege, up the second time, beat out a high bounder to Clift. Mihalic's fly to West temporarily relieved the Browns of further embarrassment.

St. Louis came back fighting in its half of the second, but fell a little shy—five runs to be exact, of matching its guest. Lary's triple, a wild pitch, Solters' double and Bell's single were the damaging blows.

After that it was no contest, Washington scoring a run in the fourth, and its last four in the fifth, with Joe Kuhel's two doubles featuring the attack. St. Louis picked up two futile runs in the eighth when Clift clubbed his twentieth home run of the season into the left-field stands with Lary resting on first.

Millies Injured.

Catcher Walter Millies was injured in the second game when struck on the hand by a foul tip off Solters' bat and had to leave the game. "Shanty" Hogan replaced him and finashed the game.

Washington broke the scoring ice in the second inning, getting one run on Stone's single followed by Travis' triple. But as in the first game, they had one big inning that clinched matters, and this time it was the fourth, which produced five runs. Briefly it went like this: Stone doubled with one down; Travis singled, scoring Stone; Sington singled and when Clift threw past second trying to get Travis, the latter scored and Freddy went to third.

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

W. M. Brown to Address Hopewell Republicans

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hopewell, Va., Sept. 15.—William Moseley Brown, former Republican nominee for Governor of Virginia, will address the members of that party in this city Thursday night at a Republican rally. At this meeting a Landon-Knox club will be formed.

While it is believed that Hopewell will go Democratic by a good majority, Republicans are claiming the city by at least 100 votes.

Brown is a past grand master of Masons in Virginia and he will be heard by a large crowd Thursday night.

Virginia Peach Crop Falls Below Average

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 15.—A yield of 608,000 bushels of commercial peaches in Virginia was estimated today for 1936 as compared to 774,000 last year and a five-year average of 839,000 bushels. Insufficient moisture is held responsible for the reduced output.

Through September 5, there were 395 carlots shipped compared with 598 in 1935. About 40 per cent of the crop, growers report, was shipped by rail and the remainder by truck or sold locally. The prices averaged about $1.75 per bushel, a little higher than last year.

U. S. Business Again Normal, Babson Asserts

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Sept. 15.—Roger W. Babson said today business, after six years of depression, has at last reached normal, and that "for the next two or three years I am bullish on everything except democracy."

"Of course I am bullish on democracy, for the long pull," the business statistician told the Advertising Club of Boston, "democracy will be the ultimate form of government. But today, due to unprincipled and selfish politicians, democracy has collapsed throughout pretty much of the entire world. Only a spiritual revival can prevent such a collapse in America."

For the fourth time since he began studying business curves 35 years ago, Babson said it had crossed the normal line and is back again to the average of 1925, '26 and '27.

"If the heavy industries and general building construction were active business would be far above the normal line, approaching 1929 highs," he added.

He said 1936 will be the best since 1929 for automobiles and steel and among lines equalling or exceeding 1929 peaks he cited retail trade, power production, cement and electrical appliances.

He predicted a sharp advance in the price of real estate, commodities and stocks, wages and interest rates, larges farm crops and a rise in railroad traffic.

He said the only shortage will be in "those fundamental characteristics of integrity, industry and thrift which have made America."

"Apparently there will be a shortage in these crops for sometime because Dr. Roosevelt has so doped the American people during the past few years that we have not learned the lessons which a depression usually teachers."

He attacked the Federal tax on undistributed earnings, enacted by the last Congress, and told his audience not to worry about unemployment, droughts and the condition of the farmer.

He expressed optimism over the future of stocks which will profit from the coming recovery in the heavy industries, but said "the bond market is today where the stock market was in 1929 when you lost your shirt."

"I believe that bankers and trustees who are now buying callable, non-convertible, low rate 20-year bonds for their institutions are making a great mistake," he added. "They are now speculating in bonds just as they speculated in stocks during the last boom."

Philippine Plebiscite.

Manila, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Philippine National Assembly today approved a bill calling for a plebiscite on the question of suffrage for women in the Philippine Islands.

Local firemen, responding to a call in the rear of police headquarters yesterday afternoon were chagrined to find a Capitol Heights Fire Department truck there ahead of them.

But their chagrin was as nothing compared to that of Fire Chief W. H. Wells, of Capitol Heights, when he learned that police here had impounded the apparatus for illegal parking.

The Capitol Heights Volunteer Fire Department needed supplies for its weekly carnival. The hose was taken from one of its trucks and Fireman Joseph Thompson dispatched to Washington with the vehicle. He parked at Seventh and D streets northwest.

While Thompson shopped at a nearby department store, Patrolman C. C. Haines, of the Traffic Division, noticed that the truck was obstructing traffic. He called a crane and had the vehicle removed to the lot in the rear of police headquarters, where it was impounded.

Thompson learned of the fate of his truck and also learned that it would cost $5 to get it out. He called Chief Wells for advice.

Wells lost no time in getting to Washington and registering a protest with Inspector Benjamin A. Lamb. He was informed that the regular cost of releasing an impounded vehicle was $5, but that, seeing it was a fire truck, he could get it back for the bargain price of $3, which is the cost of hiring the crane.
